AMERICAN ARGOSY COMES TO GRIEF

SHORTAGE OF FUEL COMPELS AIR NAVIGATOR TO COME DOWN

Dropped Down Thru a Dense Fog and Lands At Ver-Sur-Mer On North French Coast—Was In the Air Forty Hours—Went a Distance of 4200 Miles, 295 Miles Further Than Chamberlin Went To Germany.

Battered by storm and blinded by fog, with compass out of order and out of gasoline, the giant transatlantic monoplane of Commander Richard E. Byrd sped swiftly to the sea at Ver-Sur-mer, on the coast of Normandy, early Friday morning, valiantly completing its great transoceanic hop—but 175 miles west of its goal, Paris.

Not until virtually the last drop of gasoline was gone did the American argosy give up its determined groping in the impenetrable fog for the landing field at Le Bourget—a field that lay waiting eagerly for their arrival.

At 3:30 Friday morning, French time, after more than 40 hours in the air, the end of the heartbreaking suspense came.

"We had no choice but to seek a landing," Commander Byrd told a correspondent for the Associated Press. "I sent down a flare and then followed with the plane."

But there was more than that. The great plane which had leaped with such power from the runway at Roosevelt field in the early dawn of Wednesday, was still mighty in its final swoop to earth.

Landing in shallow water, it tore the wheels from the fuselage and plunged out 200 yards off the beach and then sank to the top of its wing in the booming surf.

It was then that Commander Byrd's painstaking foresight came into play and the rubber life raft that he had been so careful to test before hopping off proved its service. Clinging to their now helpless ship, the four American airmen succeeded in launching their raft and manning it, rowed quickly to shore.

Not content with simply assuring their own safety, the aviators, true to the tradition of their calling, made several trips to the plane to obtain their most important equipment, personal effects, a sack of mail and some of their precious records, altho much valuable scientific data was lost to Commander Byrd's great disappointment.

They walked on the shore for two weary hours until they succeeded in getting in touch with fishermen who took them to the nearby lighthouse of Ver-sur-Mer and the home of the acting mayor, where they found food and much needed sleep.

Friday the great plane that had served them so well was dragged from the sea by fishermen and naval men from the port of Cherbourg under direction of two of the crew of the America. The engines were demounted and carefully gone over, while every piece of equipment that could be saved was stowed away.

He sent out an SOS at 1:45 a. m. in hope that a plane would be sent up to guide him to Le Bourget field. He sent no other messages after that because, being unable to determine how near the ground the America was flying, he was afraid the trailing aerial would catch on a tree or roof.

As for the compass, principal cause of the inability to follow a direct route to Paris, it was the earth inductor one that went wrong, the commander said.

He had two others, which he styled ordinary mariners' compasses, but under existing conditions he was unable to navigate with them when the earth inductor ceased functioning.

Despite the failure of the America to reach Paris, two things stood out Friday night; the first was that if Commander Byrd's calculations are correct, the America covered a distance of 4200 miles, or 295 miles farther than Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine covered on their flight to Germany.

The second was the great skill displayed by the aviators in navigating the Atlantic in such weather as would have forced the captains of even the greatest liners to reduce speed and to grope their way thru the fog.

Only at rare intervals did they catch a glimpse of the threatening ocean below them thru fog and clouds. Yet they reached the coast of France in safety and only lost their way when their compass went back on them.

Friday night the American airmen are the heroes of all France and more than heroes to the little seaside town of Ver-Sur-mer, to which they brought the first breath of fame since a Spanish galleon, a remnant of the great armada that once plowed the seas toward England, crashed off the rocks there in 1583.

Commander Byrd and his three companions have joined Charles A. Lindbergh in his niche in the hearts of the French people. The courage with which they faced stupendous odds against them, the skill that carried them thru one of the worst nightmares that aviation history knows, and the splendid fight for life that they put in a howling storm while all France lay fog hidden beneath them has caught Gallic imagination just as did the lonely dash of Lindbergh.

They failed to reach Paris—whether they passed over it in the darkness of the stormy night no one knows, not even Commander Byrd, altho he thinks he may have, but they demonstrated to the satisfaction of the average man that the terrors of fog and rain—those great bugaboos of the air—are not so deadly as they once seemed.

But the greatest thing was—and that's all that really mattered to the man in the street—"they're safe and sound."

The came down over Ver-Sur-Mer with gasoline and oil tanks empty and compass out of gear after hours of maneuvering above the clouds for a sight of a landing place or any hole in the cloudbanks that might permit them to get their bearings.

WORD BATTLE ON BETWEEN MOVIE STARS

Charlie Chaplin Says He is Home Lover While Wife is Cold and Cruel.

The barrage of words hurled back and forth between Charles Chaplin, film comedian and his estranged wife Lita Grey Chaplin, continued with unabated vigor Saturday in Los Angeles.

With thousands of words of accusations on each side already in court files, 61 closely typewritten pages consisting of Mrs. Chaplin's answer to her husband's cross complaint for divorce, were before superior court Saturday.

Mrs. Chaplin was a devoted young wife, she declared in her answer. Chaplin, she said, was a cold, cruel husband.

In Chaplin's cross bill filed a few days previously, he charged Mrs. Chaplin was a woman of the world while he was a home loving, hard working actor, anxious to return to his wife each evening after work.

None of Chaplin's complaints about her, however, were true, Mrs. Chaplin replied. She denied in much detail that she had even been friendly with other men "in the manner intimated by her husband."

Chaplin, she said, merely was inordinately jealous.

INVESTIGATE THE DEATH OF ALTON DAVIS

Young Men Had Accident
About Same Time, But
at Different Place.

Sheriff Davis is making an investigation as to the cause of the death of Alton Davis which occurred Sunday night on the Williamsport pike about one and a half miles east of New Holland.

The sheriff learned that Curtis Wagner and Hoadley Downing, both of Jackson township, had had an accident on the New Holland-Williamsport pike, and he interviewed them. The young men left New Holland a short time before the death was reported in the village. They admitted they were in a collision and claimed that about one and a half miles east of the point where Alton Davis lost his life they were run into by a Ford which went on toward New Holland.

They were riding in Wagner's Buick automobile and when examined by Sheriff Davis, the fenders were badly damaged, a hanger on the engine was broken and the body of the car was badly scratched.

On the morning following the death of Alton Davis, the sheriff found, at the scene of the accident, a Buick hub cap. When the Wagner car was examined by the sheriff, it had on four hub caps, two old and two newer.

Alton Davis had driven some distance on the rim of one of the wheels and the missing tire was found on the New Holland pike, near the Cross roads from Atlanta to Dublin Hill.

Synthetic Rubber

During the World war when Germany was cut off from supplies of crude rubber a great effort was made to produce synthetic rubber. Toward the close of the war about 150 tons of synthetic rubber were being produced monthly in Germany from isoprene derivatives, but the product was inferior to natural rubber and really served well only in hard-rubber goods. The industry ceased at the close of the war.

USE OF JACK

On Window Bars Inclines Suspicion To Convict.

C. T. Wells, alias Mason and Caldwell, who is being sought by Pickaway county authorities and a private detective agency in connection with the burglarizing of the Friedman store at Circleville recently, is believed to be the man who entered Stocklin & Herrstein's hardware store here June 23 and escaped with knives and revolvers valued at $800.

Wells, an ex-convict, is linked with the Circleville burglary by the confessions of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ivie, now being held in the Pickaway county jail. They intimate, it is understood, that Wells, after evading arrest at Hamilton may have returned here and stolen the knives and guns, articles which he had been asked to procure for an unknown "fence" in Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivie were arrested in Hamilton Thursday, the day before the burglary at the local hardware store. Wells was with the couple but succeeded in escaping arrest.

Local police are interested in the case from the Chillicothe angle, and Police Chief Maughmer and Bank Detective George Hamm went to Circleville this week and interviewed the Ivies, learning, it is understood, that Wells often employs a jack to gain entrance to stores. It was using a jack that the barred second story window of the local hardware store was opened.

Furthermore, the police learned from the Ivies, that Wells had remarked to them while in Hamilton, preceding their arrest, that he had an order for knives and guns in Cincinnati. Wells has been in Chillicothe many times, it is said, and is well acquainted with the layout of local stores.

Earl Ivie and Wells served time together in the Jefferson, Indiana, pen, it is understood, and that upon their release bought a Reo speed wagon to use in making wholesale robberies of stores. The Ivies had the truck and part of the Friedman loot with them when arrested.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

Leaves on Apple Trees

Tests made at the Arlington farm by government horticulturists showed that at least 30 to 40 medium-sized leaves per fruit were necessary to obtain apples of good size and quality. When a smaller number of leaves was present, the fruit was not only smaller in size, but was low in dry weight, low in sugar content and of poor dessert quality.

Sunspots First Seen

The first recorded observation of sunspots is found in the journal of Henry Hudson on his voyage across the Atlantic in 1609. The observation is dated May 21. It was more than a year later that Harriot and Galileo observed this phenomenon.

GREAT TRUTH, BUT REALLY NOT NEW

"Men are funny." That's not such an unusual statement as to be startling. The startling part about the observation is that a man made it—a man who, in his daily task of giving shaves and haircuts, has plenty of opportunity to know whereof he speaks.

"In the old days before women invaded my shop," explained the barber, "men would come in and sometimes wait as much as two hours for their turn in the chair. Now, because I have so much feminine trade, some of my work is by appointment. "If a man comes in on chance and has to wait for some one who comes in after him, but who has an appointment, he's so disgruntled he's likely not to come back. And probably he's waited only a half hour. It isn't the wait—it's the fact that some one comes in after him with the privilege of going ahead of him. Yes, men are funny."—Philadelphia Record.

Too Smart

"Well, sir, my ten children have got the mumps, and when you are 'way down the road you can hear 'em mumpin'," said Lufe Lagg of Bogger Holler.

"Pshaw!" returned the traveler to whom the news was related, "you can't hear the mumps. You—"

Sugar Be Praised

Dr. Woods Hutchinson finds health in the sugar bowl habit. Pitying our forefathers, he says they obtained their carbohydrates, not in granulated sweetness, but in cannon-ball dumpings, loaded with chunks of fat, spices and sour prunes, which they called plum pudding. Small wonder, he says, those dumpling-eating pioneers awoke with a head like a concertina, and a mouth like a lime kiln.

Liberal allowance for your old cleaner

You won't have to postpone owning a Greater Hoover until your old, inefficient cleaner is completely useless. You can know the joy of Hoover cleaning immediately. You can have the aid of the Hoover all through these summer months, when the daily burden of blown-in dust is so great and Hoover helpfulness means so much.

Just call us on the phone. We'll make an appraisal of your old machine—without the slightest charge or obligation—and give you a generous allowance for it on the purchase of your new Hoover.

Just think what a difference

having the Hoover is going to make in your enjoyment of the summer! Think of the extra time you'll have for rest—the extra vitality you'll have for play—if the Hoover is relieving you of the burden of cleaning—and doing it better than it's ever been done before.

"Positive Agitation," the revolutionary cleaning principle of the Greater Hoover, sets a new standard of home cleanliness. If you don't know the untold difference which this amazing principle makes in cleaning, you owe it to yourself to have a Hoover demonstration. Only $6.25 down, balance monthly, if you wish to purchase.

You can now get "Positive Agitation" in a new popular-priced Hoover model. Ask us about it.

SAYS UNITED STATES

Can Use Good Points of All Peoples.

The United States has need of all the fine qualities of all the peoples that go to make up its polyglot population, declares an editorial in this week's Liberty. "Since the feat of Charles Lindbergh inspired the youth of the world as perhaps no other feat of modern times has done," the editorial points out, "we have heard a great deal about the triumph of the Nordic spirit and its value to the United States."

"We need the Nordic," the editorial asserts, "but would an overwhelming majority of Scandinavians be desirable? With all their admirable qualities, peoples from cold, sunless countries are inclined to be dour and severe. Is it not desirable, from a purely American standpoint, to mellow the sternness and dourness of the Nordic with the lightheartedness and emotion of the Venetian, the music and mirth of the Italian, who, though digging in the ditch, will spend his last dollar to sit in the gallery to hear his beloved grand opera."

"These, too, have contributed largely," the editorial continues, "to the making of what we call the American race. Each adopted American has brought to us something good for all. All are good, and each has a separate value. We would be sorry to exclude any of these who furnish new vitality to the nation."

'DEAD' TOWN NOW IS GOLD CENTER

Veteran Kept Secret for 24 Years; Now Controls Entire Strike.

Summitville, Colo.—Dead and deserted for many years, Summitville is on the golden threshold of a new birth. Its western hills again are yielding the precious metal as a result of the faith that John Pickens, veteran miner, kept secret for 24 years. Once the outpost of an advancing gold rush, Summitville late in the last century became a thriving village of 1,500 souls, with the attendant dance halls, saloons and gambling houses. Then came the slump. The veins "petered out." Prospectors pulled their stakes and sought richer fields, and Summitville became another of Colorado's ghost towns. Its once pretentious buildings crumbled into decay.

Veteran Absorbs Claims.

Pickens never lost faith, however, and yearly returned to the hills. For 24 years he quietly and slowly went about obtaining title to the once—and again—valuable lands. Now, with Judge Jesse C. Wiley of Del Norte, he bids fair to become this state's latest mining millionaire. Every foot of land in the famous old camp, as well as acres surrounding it, belongs to Pickens and Wiley. The new El Dorado does not bid to outsiders.

The discovery of the fabulous gold strike from which Pickens and Wiley already have received more than $100,000—250 pounds of ore paying them $16,032 at the Omaha smelter—was accidental. In 1902 while crossing a wash near the Little Annie mine, where he was employed, Pickens found a piece of ore about half the size of a man's head. A few days later he found a small butte, which he identified as the place from whence the original find apparently had been carried by the elements. Exposure had caused moss to form over the vein and it was difficult to detect the vein from common rock.

Kept Find a Secret.

Pickens kept the find to himself until last summer. Having obtained the required leases, he was accompanied by his son and another man, each armed with a pick, and removal of the ore was started.

The butte being inaccessible for nearly nine months of the year, Pickens and his two workers labored during the three summer months, and aside from the ore which they have sold, removed more than 25 tons which lies sacked behind barricaded doors awaiting transportation.

Summitville is in the San Juan mountains, long famous for yielding precious ores, and is approximately 40 miles southwest of Del Norte and about 250 miles southwest of Denver.

Trace of Prehistoric Race in Black Hills

Pierre, S. D.—Did a prehistoric race, who builded of stone at some time, make its home in the Black Hills of South Dakota? Or is the formation only a peculiar freak of nature, is what Donald Crabtree is attempting to prove by excavation at a point several miles south of Rapid City, near the state game lodge, where President Coolidge will have his summer home. Mr. Crabtree, with a force of men, has been working for some time on what is called a wall, built of stone laid in regular order with broken joints as bricks are laid. This has been uncovered for a distance of more than 100 feet, at which location another like "wall" was found running at right angles with the first find, and this is being explored to a greater extent.

If you have tire trouble a policeman will help you change.

If you run out of gas a policeman will bring fuel, if it is necessary.

If your radiator is boiling a policeman will help fetch water.

If the old bus won't run a policeman will help you push it to the nearest garage.

SOCIAL CALENDAR

MARSHALL-BOTKIN.

The marriage of Dr. Clyde Slocombe Marshall and Frances Rebecca Botkin took place at the home of Drs. C. T. and Margaret Curti, friends of the bride, on Friday, June 17, 1927, at four o'clock p. m. Only the Drs. Curti, the bride and groom and the minister were present. The party of five enjoyed a delicious six o'clock dinner at the Curti home.

After dinner the bride and groom were driven by the bride's college friends, Dr. and Mrs. Sheffield to their beautiful farm home between Northampton and Boston, where they remained two days. From there they went to Boston, staying over night at the new Parker House. The next morning they sailed from Boston to Yarmouth, then later on to Halifax, Nova Scotia, to visit the family of the groom.

Since 1910 the bride has made her home mostly with Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Hall at Lincoln, where she could have educational advantages, spending much time during the summers with her father and aunts, C. W. Botkin, Mrs. Jennie Newman and Miss S. Frances Botkin. During her educational work she has made unusual strides, rising to first honors on her graduation from the Lincoln High schools and the Nebraska State University. She attended the University of Nebraska a fifth year and received her master's degree. At this time, she accepted a free scholarship to the University of Chicago and before much more than a year's work there a visiting committee from Smith college selected her to be an instructor in their psychology department. She has taught five years at that college and will teach there one year more. During the past two years she has been assistant professor in her department.

The groom was born and reared at Halifax, Nova Scotia, where he graduated from Dalhousie University, receiving his Ph. D. degree later at Boston. Besides being an M. D. he has been employed for some time at the Massachusetts Neurological Institute, as a psychiatrist.

The couple will be engaged at the Boston psychopathic hospital during the months of July and August after which they will take an apartment at Northampton for one year.

At the end of the 1928 term the bride's relatives and friends may be able to enjoy another visit from her and form opinions of her learned sheik, whom she will surely fetch along.

After all the bride's friends have gone to the places they have contemplated visiting, they may go to Halifax.

But not until 1929, when they shall have established a home in that beautiful city.—The Gotherburg, Neb., Times.

Mrs. T. G. Hall mentioned above was formerly Miss Bessie Oliver, a sister of Anna Oliver Botkin, deceased wife of Charles W. Botkin, formerly of Circleville.

Birds Nest in April

In April, bluebirds, robins, chickadees, nuthatches, and phoebes begin housebuilding, says Nature Magazine. A few well-placed houses are certain to have tenants before the month is very old, and by setting them low along fences or on the laundry line poles, one may watch the birds closely.

EXTERIOR LIGHTING AS SAFEGUARD
PROTECTS THE HOME IN SUMMER

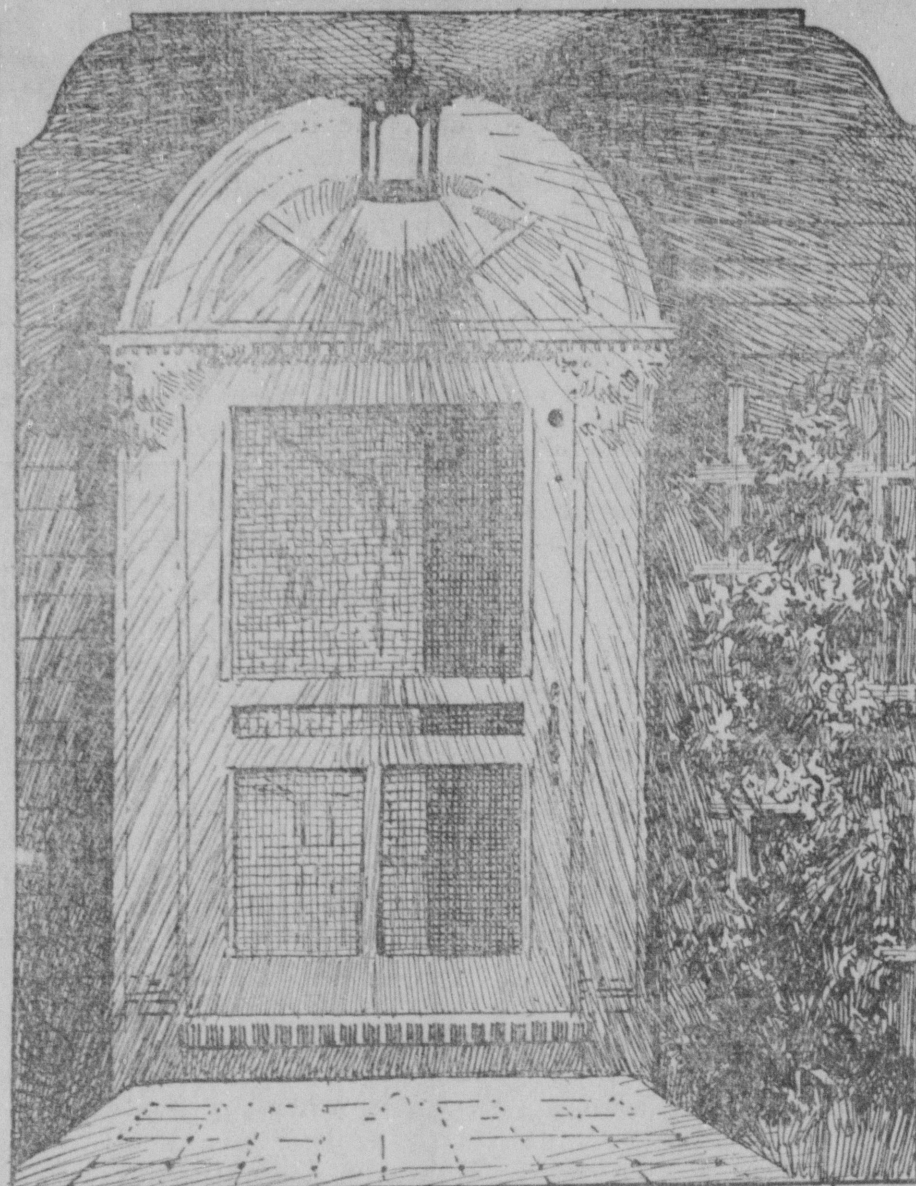

A Lantern Over the Doorway
Keeps Intruders at a Distance.

LIGHTLY fastened screen doors and open windows with screens in them, the usual condition of most homes in summer, present a problem to family heads when they desire to leave the house alone for a brief while in the evening.

The surest safeguard against intrusion is, of course, to bar the outer doors and lock the windows down, but that results in a hot house greeting one on one's return. Yet, with the average house comparatively "wide open" in the summer months, care should be taken to avoid the appearance of its being totally unguarded. This, for the family without a servant or with one who is away at night, is a vexatious question, but it is best answered by the use of exterior lighting, such as an outside lantern, swinging light or wall light, illuminated by a button from within and kept burning as late as one is absent from home.

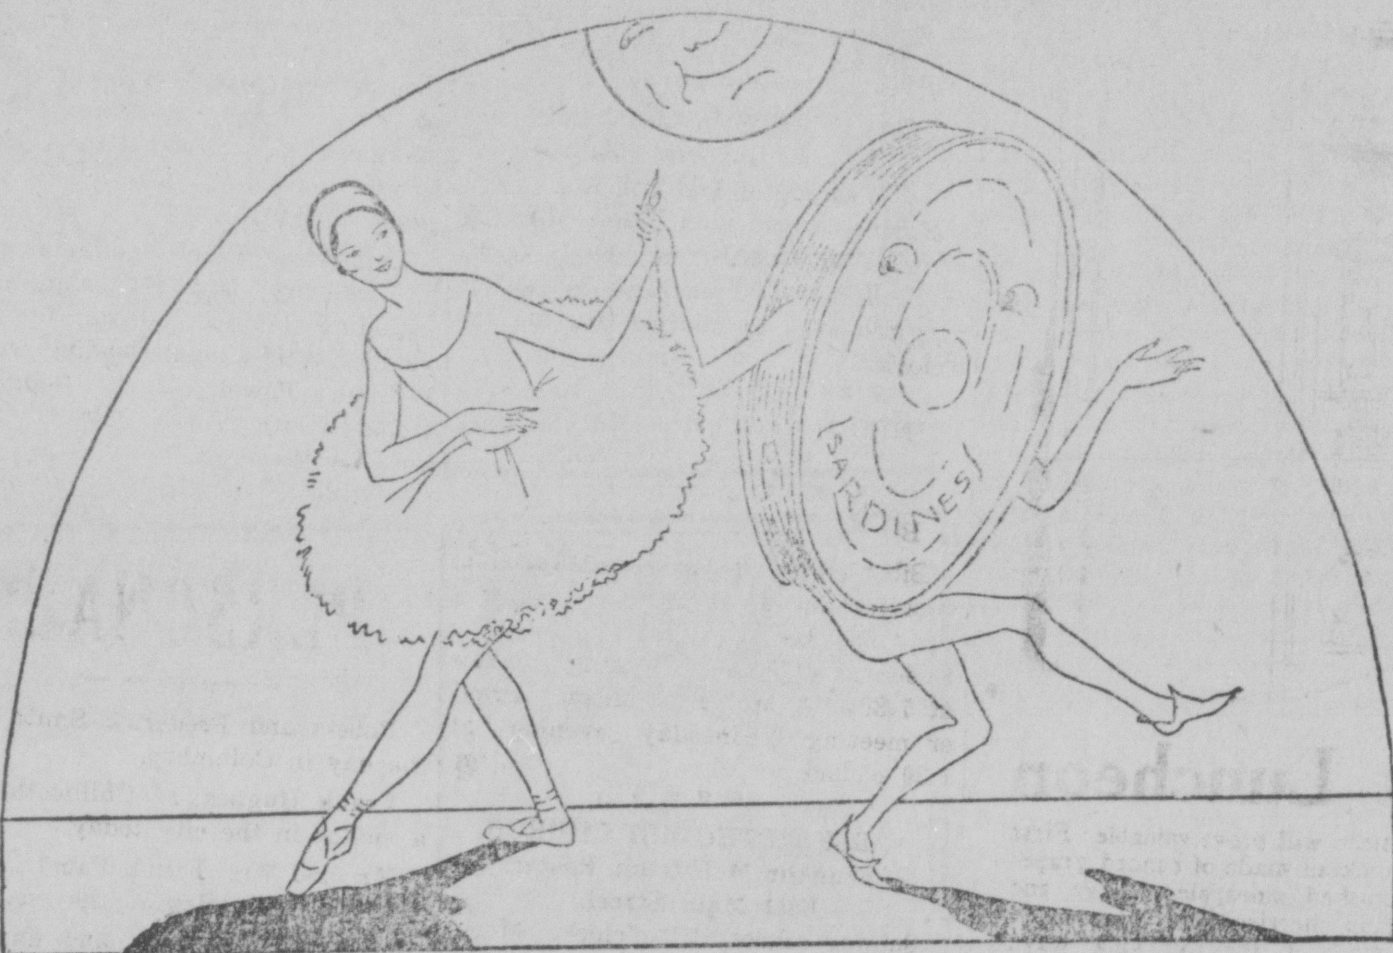

Thieves, like wild animals, fear light. They seldom molest places so illuminated, due to their natural supposition that some one is at home. And the average sneak thief, contrary to popular impression, is not, on the word of experienced police officials, so brave-hearted as to court danger and discovery.

Exterior lighting equipment has in addition to its service as a safety measure, the added virtue of beautifying the exterior of the home, and, not only in summer but throughout the year, extends a cheery welcome to friends, while at the same time warning all others of the presence within of some one. The custom of using outdoor lights, to illumine porch, piazza or entrance, is an old custom which is again finding favor in America. Architects generally advise control of the lighting from the inside of the house, as this makes it handy to light up the entrance before opening the door.

"The way was long, the night was cold,
The ballet girl was growing old,
So she bought sardines with her hard-earned pelf
And had a can-can all to herself."

THIS doggerel was written many years ago. Jazz dances have replaced the can-can, but sardines have retained their popularity, and there are now many new varieties of canned food to comfort the ballet girl.

Strange as it may seem, there is no such thing as a "sardine." Fish known as sardines, are small pilchard minnows abounding in Mediterranean waters and were called sardines because they were first canned on the island of Sardinia. Sprats, mussels, sild fish, all belonging to the herring family, are packed in various countries throughout the world as sardines. It isn't the fish that matters so much as the way in which it is canned. The French canners put oil, truffles, and other dressings with the fish, and pack them very closely into the cans. Most of the canners use olive oil alone.

The California small sardines resemble the Mediterranean species more than any fish of the same type in other parts of the world. Since 1905, however, Southern California canners have been putting up a larger variety combined with tomato sauce in one-pound oval tins, and these have become popular.

The large oval can has several advantages, a very obvious one being that it contains enough fish for a whole family. In college dormitories, too, where sardines have always been popular for impromptu feasts, the new style of can is recommended as being dent appetites—and also to student nurses, for, comparatively speaking, the price of the oval can of sardines is in inverse ratio to its size.

So, though their salty, meaty taste is superlatively appetizing, sardines need no longer be relegated to the lesser place for an hors d'oeuvre. Anyone has only to try the two following dishes to discover that sardines are now wanted more than an accessory.

Duchesse Potato with Sardines. Boil potatoes, mash, add milk, salt and pepper, and beat until creamy. Make a large oval mound of them on a platter of oven glass. Sprinkle grated cheese over the potato, and surround it with small pieces of toast on which are laid evenly the contents of a large oval can of sardines halved lengthwise and boned. Put the platter under the broiler just long enough to melt the cheese. Serve with this dish finely shredded cabbage well mixed with mayonnaise dressing, a pinch of salt being added, and on top a generous sprinkling of paprika.

Broiled Sardines on Toast. Remove the contents from a large oval tin of sardines, place them on a broiler and broil them for about three minutes. Butter the toast and then spread it with a very thin coating of mustard. Place the sardines on the toast and serve immediately.

All who value their health should live on light diets during the summer. For these the great refuge is the salad, all kinds of salads. Sardines are a most useful salad, as their spicy flavor leads to a larger consumption of leafy foods. The following suggestions are made for using them:

Sardines in Tomato Jelly. Strain the juice from a large can of tomatoes. Dissolve two tablespoons gelatin in half a cup of boiling water and add this with teaspoon of paprika, half a teaspoon of onion juice, and salt and pepper to taste. Add these to the tomato juice, simmer five minutes in double boiler. Strain through cheese cloth. Pour half the mixture into a ring mold and let it partially set. Then put in sardines that have been skinned and pour in the rest of the mixture. When firm turn out on a platter and fill the hole in the center with mayonnaise and garnish the outer edge with lettuce leaves.

Sardine Salad. Shred half a lettuce, chop three sticks of celery, skin, bone and break into pieces the contents of a large oval tin of sardines. Combine with mayonnaise dressing and serve on lettuce leaves.

Sardine and Egg Salad. Cut into pieces three hard-boiled eggs and the contents of one large oval tin of sardines. Combine with mayonnaise dressing and serve on lettuce leaves in a circle of sliced cucumber and sliced radishes.

Picnic Sandwiches. Mash large sardines after skinning and boning them, mix with mayonnaise dressing and chopped cucumber pickle. Spread between two or Graham bread.

French Reign of Terror

The Reign of Terror was the period in France beginning about March, 1793, when the revolutionary tribunal was appointed, and ending in July, 1794, with the overthrow of Robespierre and his associates. During this time a great number of persons, principally of the aristocracy, were executed.

TEMPERATURE
IS GOING UP
CENTURY MARK

Friday night was a sizzler and very little comfort resulted from the slight precipitation that fell about one o'clock Saturday morning and more rain is promised. The heat wave is general thruout the county with a number of heat prostrations in the cities. Sippo and Dewey park did a land office business as both swimming resorts were patronized liberally. The kids cooled off in Hargus, Darby and Hominy creeks. Their bathing suits were not the same as those used at the fashionable bathing resorts, but its dollars to doughnuts, they enjoyed the splash as much, even tho they were dressed in sunshine and smiles.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald:—Sarah J. Berger, daughter of David and Susanna Stout Pontius, was born in Washington township, Pickaway county, Ohio, September 30, 1856.

She was baptized in infancy and at the proper age by the rite of confirmation, became a member of the Evangelical Lutheran church at East Ringgold, of which church, she remained a consistent member to the time of her death, which occurred on Monday morning, June 27, 1927, at the age of 70 years, eight months and 27 days.

She was united in marriage to Eli Heffner June 16, 1876. To this union was born one daughter, Corella, wife of Charles C. Heffner, of Walnut township. The husband and father was accidentally killed May 18, 1877. October 25, 1881, she was united in marriage to Franklin P. Berger, who preceded her to the home beyond August 8, 1925.

There are left to mourn her passing her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Heffner of Walnut township; one brother, W. H. Pontius, one niece, Mrs. Clarence Ater and one nephew, Leland Pontius all of this city, and a host of friends and acquaintances, many of whom ministered to her during her two years illness and affliction.

Mrs. Berger will long be remembered for her life of kindly deeds, her sympathy and help always going out to those in distress. She fell asleep, we believe with full confidence of her peace, with her God. She was laid to rest beside her husband in the Berger mausoleum in Reber Hill cemetery.

Those attending the funeral from out of the city, were Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Stout and son, of Delaware, Ohio; Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Tobias and Mrs. Anna Fisher, of Cleveland; Mr. and Mrs. D. A. Heffner, Mr. and Mrs. O. M. Heffner and Mrs. Almada Anderson, of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs. Grant Dildine and daughter and Mr. Delno Berger, of Groveport; Mr. and Mrs. Willard Barch, of Duval; Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Hook and family, Mr. and Mrs. Irvin Swayer, Mr. Emanuel Berger and son, Mrs. E. A. Snyder, of Ashville; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kennedy, of Amanda, and Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Myers, of Stoutsville.

Card of Thanks.

We take this means of expressing our appreciation and extend our thanks to our neighbors and friends for the many acts of kindness and words of sympathy, also for the many beautiful floral tributes on the occasion of the sickness and death of our mother and sister. Also to Rev. Smith for his comforting words and to Mr. C. E. Hill for the splendid and efficient manner in handling the funeral arrangements.

Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Heffner
W. H. Pontius and Family.

HORSE ON MAIL
ROUTE 21 YEARS

Old Bay Mare Still Gives Faithful Service.

Kokomo, Ind.—The old bay mare is still what she used to be, 20 long years ago.

Daisy is twenty-three. Ever since she was two she has traveled a rural mail route out of Kokomo. She has seen her equine kin give way to motorized service, and she has tilted an ear skyward at the hum of an airmail plane, roaring from New York to Chicago in less time than it takes Daisy to make her little circuit twice a day.

But Daisy disdains the thought that any motor car or airplane could take her place. She could almost deliver the mail alone.

She is credited by Ben Boughman, her present owner, with having twice saved his life, when he failed to see trains at grade crossings.

Throughout the years Daisy has pulled the same tiny and ancient mail cart with which she started. She has lost but 15 days at work, and that because she hurt a leg in the line of duty.

The carrier who trained Daisy is long since dead, but the horse passed to succeeding carriers without a break in her service record.

Faithfully she plods around her route, and when she gets home she refuses to go another step. When her owner loiters on the homeward trip, Daisy goes on home to supper and lets her master leg it.

She has one complex. Circus day has scared her ever since the ringmaster rode down Main street ahead of the parade shouting "Hold your horses, the elephants are coming." When the big top is spread in Kokomo, Daisy is skittish all day.

Right now Daisy is on her annual vacation. Each summer she spends an outing in a familiar pasture. But she'll be back at the old grind in the fall.

Her Come-Back

He—Now that we are married, perhaps I might venture to point out a few of your little defects.
She—Don't bother, dear. I am quite aware of them. It was those little defects that prevented me from getting a much better man than you are.

Sidewalk Conversation

Style Changes In Tomatoes

THE tomato has worn many garbs during its four hundred years of appearing on the tables of Europe and America. First it was used raw. As soon as it was discovered that it tasted good when cooked, there came into existence for the detection of millions of consumers that good old-fashioned dish, stewed tomatoes. How seldom do we see stewed tomatoes on a menu now! The stew has become a scallion, a soufflé, a tomato omelet. Canned tomato is used in a dozen new ways in dishes where it is the main ingredient, and as an accessory to other dishes. Lately, the juice strained from canned tomatoes has become popular with many people as a summer drink, either between meals or at the beginning of a meal. In some of the best-known health resorts a pitcher of tomato juice is kept on the table.

Tomato-Egg Aspic—Blend a can of tomatoes with a can of beef bouillon, seasoning with salt, pepper, celery and onion salt. Soak gelatin in one-fourth cup of the liquid, allowing the proportion of gelatin indicated on the package to each one and a quarter cups of liquid. Bring the remaining mixture to a boil and dissolve gelatin in it, then allow to cool. Cut six hard-boiled eggs in two, remove the yolks, and mix them with mayonnaise, then replace in the whites and put the halves together, tying the eggs around a circular mold. Pour the cooled tomato-bouillon mixture over them and chill. Fill the center of the mold, when set, with finely shredded cabbage, generously mixed with mayonnaise dressing.

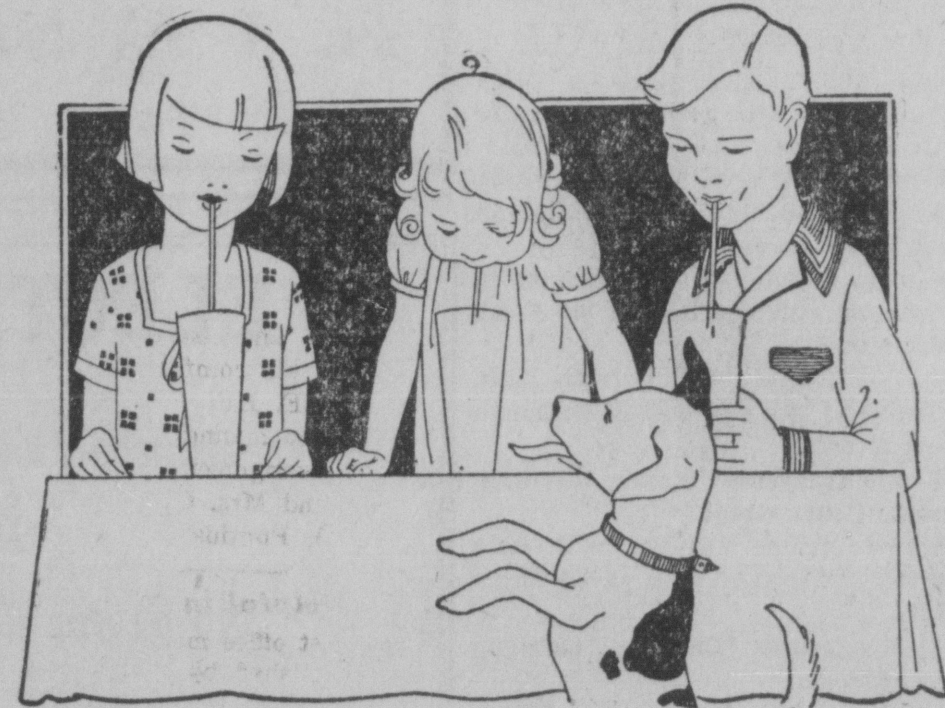

Planning a Buffet Luncheon

ONE of the advantages of a buffet luncheon is that the number of guests to be invited is not limited by the size of the dining-table. The center table will hold hot buttered biscuits, cake, almonds, candy, and coffee service.

A still greater advantage is the ease with which such an affair may be carried out. On a sudden inspiration the hostess may telephone her friends in the morning and, if she has a liberal and varied supply of canned foods on her shelf, she can have luncheon ready without undue hurry by noon. If she serves it on her broad piazza, the occasion will be informal and delightful.

This menu will prove valuable: First a fruit cocktail made of canned grapefruit, crushed pineapple, orange and maraschino cherries. Second, a salad course made in the following way: Spread shredded lettuce on each plate, cover the center with chopped celery, and around this place a ring of stringless beans and peas. On top of the celery put tuna fish broken into pieces, and in the very center a small pickle. On one side place a mound of chopped beets, and one of mayonnaise dressing. For dessert an apricot ice cream may be quickly and easily made, if one has a can of apricots on the shelf.

A Cool Summer Drink

EXPERIENCE and scientific study have demonstrated that milk is the only food for which there is no effective substitute. It is high in protein, contains all the known vitamins, and is so constituted as to enhance the nutritive value of other foods. It is one of the so-called "protective foods," and medical authorities recommend that everyone take a daily portion of milk.

But, as some people are not fond of drinking milk plain, it is necessary for them to consume their daily quota in soups, sauces, custards, ice cream, cocoa, or disguised in other ways. One of the newer and more delightful modes is to add to milk, hot or cold, two or three teaspoonfuls of one of the chocolate malted milk products. These are in powder form, and should be added to the top of the milk and beaten into it with an egg-beater. The more beating the better, for the liquid is thus vitalized with oxygen.

Children like to drink chocolate malted milk through a straw as it foams invitingly in a tall glass. In winter they take it hot; in summer ice-cold; and for dessert they ask sometimes to have chocolate or vanilla ice cream added to it. It then becomes what a soda counter artist would call "a chocolate malted milk shake with ice cream."

Invalids welcome this variation to their restricted diet; the man or woman who comes home tired after a hard day is renewed in cheerfulness and energy by a glass of this wholesome drink. Either as part of a meal or as an extra, chocolate malted milk is a tempting, highly nutritious food; a real body-builder.

AMUSEMENTS

The misadventures of a rookie postman will be revealed for the first time in motion pictures when Eddie Cantor's latest Paramount comedy, "Special Delivery" opens at the Met theater Monday for a three days engagement.

In this second of his starring vehicles under the Paramount banner the former Broadway comedian and star of "Kid Boots" once more presents himself, as he did in his first picture, as the exponent of those who labor in the field of public service. Cantor's postman goes from one ludicrous experience to another, gets into all sorts of hilarious situations and out of them again, but thru it all he is human, helpful and lovable.

Funny as these situations are, amusing as Cantor is in his letter carrier role, underlying all of the fun is a note of sincerity that makes one laugh with rather than at the subject of his mirth.

Cantor's postman, as he trudges the streets laden with letters and packages, is a pathetic figure who enlists one's sympathy.

When he hugs a squalling baby around for an hour while waiting for a forgetful mother to return and when in the purposeful pursuit of duty he insists upon taking a special delivery letter to the dressing room of the addressee and gets into all sorts of difficulties back stage, finally to blunder out onto the stage of a packed theater during the progress of the show the fun waxes uproarious.

Thru all the comedy, however, runs a strong thread of a completely worked out story. There's the girl with whom the postman is in love and for whose affections he vies with the Cop on the Beat and the Fireman from Station 12. There's the get-rich-quick specialist who is using the mails to defraud and who smoothly works his way into confidence of the girl and persuades her to accompany him, on promise of marriage, in his gateway to South America, only to be frustrated after a thrilling chase by Cantor.

Supporting Eddie Cantor in "Special Delivery" is a well balanced cast including Jobyna Ralston, for three years Harold Lloyd's leading woman, William Powell, Jack Dougherty, Donald Keith, Victor Potel, Paul Kelly and Mary Carr. William Goodrich directed.

OPEN-AIR CHORALS OLYMPIC OF SONG

In August I was in Wales, to see for the first time the Royal Welsh Eisteddfod, a gathering of Welsh culture that goes back to the Twelfth century for its birthday, or even earlier. I should think that ten or even twenty thousand were here for the ancient Druid festival, to listen to the poems and songs that Old-World harpists set waving on the air. The chief choral prize, as heretofore, is open to the world. To hear the leading choirs of the British Isles in the open air at such an event provides a memory that will not soon pass away. It is an Olympic of song. If you want to enjoy quaint costumes and scenic effects reminiscent of a thousand years of a small nation's art and music, then the Eisteddfod, with its gowned druids, tall-hat women harpists, banners inscribed with mystic Celtic symbols, with its bards touching the ancient sword of peace or blowing Hira's horn, is the festival for any summer visitor to old Wales.—From "My European Excursions," by Robert Petre.

Still View Lenin's Corpse

So well was the body of Lenin embalmed that thousands still view its lifelike lineaments daily at Moscow, though his death occurred several years ago. Recently the authorities were accused of substituting a wax figure for the corpse. They sent for a German scientist to open the case and prove to the public it was really Lenin's body. While in power Lenin tried to suppress all religion. Now the religious Russians whisper that the devil himself is preserving Lenin's body that he may burn it later.

Idea Is a Good One

"It is an excellent practice to carry money always in more than one pocket," says a writer in an exchange. This is a commendable idea, fellows. Carry plenty of money at all times in every pocket. Nothing is a surer guarantee against embarrassment than 12 or 14 pockets full of money.—Boston Transcript.

"I hear you want a new car," said the automobile salesman who had managed to sneak into old man Black's office.

"No, I don't," snapped the old man, but my wife does, and she also wants a trip to Europe, a million dollars and forty pounds off her weight, and she has just as much chance of getting a new car as she has any of the others. The way you came in takes you out, make your going snappy."

Too Hot-Headed

Critic—You have made your hero too hot-headed, I'm afraid.

Padding Author—How do you mean?

"Well, he has a lantern jaw to begin with. And so his whole face lit up! His cheeks flamed, he gave a burning glance, and then, blazing with wrath and boiling with rage, he administered a scorching rebuke."

Belle—Oh, aren't our marines wonderful? To think that just a handful of them can drive all those millions of Chinese out of the country!

Unfortunate Remark

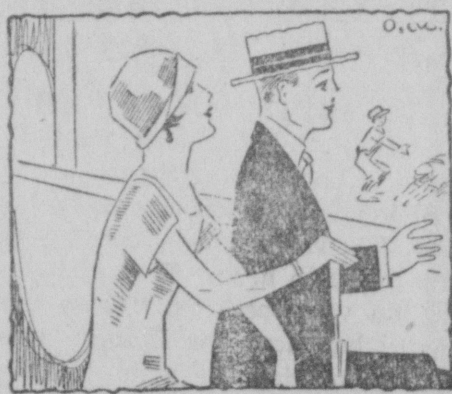

Roscoe—Darling, you have teeth like pearls.

Marie—You brute! Are you hinting that I have a mouth like an oyster?

Plenty of It

Dentist—You yelled like a wild man. I thought you had at least a little nerve.

"Money can take you anywhere, Save where you can't take it."

Finding Out

Hazel—The lights went out and one of the boys kissed me—George.
Mabel—How did you know it was George?

Hazel—He asked my forgiveness this morning.

And Now You Know

"Ah, you are the young man in question? What's your name?"
"Ivan Auszeichnungenguecktekl."
"How do you spell it?"
"As it is pronounced!"—Pele Mele, Paris.

All Off

He—True, my salary is not large, but then, two can live as cheaply as one.

She—But, Tom, dear, you forget—there's mother.

Wise

Ted—I saw my doctor about my loss of memory.
Jerry—What did he do?
Ted—Made me pay in advance.

Economy

Visitor—How is it that you have a picture of just one of the twins.
Mrs. Thrifty—They both look exactly alike, so what's the difference?

Diet for Mentality III

Because mental illness is a disorder of the entire individual and not merely of the mind, the diet should be prescribed with the same care concerning proper balance and vitamin content as in physical illness, declares Dr. L. Watch Your Woolens!

With the summer season, the moth miller is abroad hunting a good place to lay her eggs. She prefers woolens as a good place to deposit her eggs, for there will be good feeding for her young.

Keep the cover on your upholstered furniture, brushed at least once each week, remove all cushions, and use your electric cleaner now and then. DO NOT COVER YOUR FURNITURE WITH COVERS. The young moth will crawl thru the covering and destroy your coverings before you are aware of their presence.

Place your woolen clothing and blankets in a moth-proof chest and cease to worry. We have just received a large shipment of "Treasure Chests" lined inside with red cedar, with walnut on the outside. They are beautifully finished and will add greatly to the beauty of the room, as well as serve as a protection to your clothing.

Priced from $16.50 up

Haven't you often wished that you had a folding chair to take with you on picnics and camping tours? We have some that are very fine for that purpose. They fold up into a small space, yet are comfortably lazy. They are very handy around the house when guests arrive, especially for use on the porch. They are strong, holding the largest persons, and yet are low priced.

Chic Sports Duds in Many Variants

Frocks, Suits, Ensembles for General Wear Are Fashionable, Flattering.

Sports dress is the fantastic note in the season's fashions. Its vogue, says a fashion authority in the New York Times, is apparently without reason, contradicting all the conventions of dress, yet like a coquette winning her capricious way, compels acceptance and approval. The name has come to express not equipment for sports activity, nor, for the matter of that, activity of any sort, but just a chic costume of a certain type which is in universal favor at present.

The sports frock, suit or ensemble is chic, youthful, slenderizing and a tribute to the genius of the designers who created a style which is all of these things successfully. Only an unerring judgment and a keen sense of proportion could express in dress these essentials to the comfort and content of women of varying sizes, figures and ages. The border between the suitable and unsuitable, the graceful and the grotesque is insubstantial, and it is quite clearly and charmingly defined in sports clothes for summer. The mode has grown into favor very gradually, but now that it has arrived the response is overwhelming.

Extravagant expressions of the sports suit idea were shown last season in the models in a mannish style, but of the most elaborate materials; handsome brocades and metallic cloths, handled as if they were homespun, and chevrons, and made into tunic blouses with short tailored skirts. With the gradual prevailing of feminine qualities, however, the sports costume has held its vogue and is now presented in the finest and most delicate fabrics, soft crepes and silks, voiles and, at the moment, chiffon, with the indorsement of exclusive houses.

One of the latest models from a famous French couturier is of white and black chiffon in a large plaid pattern, the blouse made in such fashion as to emphasize the white. The skirt, laid in deep box plaits, makes the black more conspicuous, giving the effect of irregular stripes, which is very skillfully done, and very pretty. Another sports frock of this sort is built of geranium red chiffon; both the bodice, which blouses over the girdle that swatches the hips, and the skirt are finely plaited, giving a fluttery movement. This model has narrow velvet ribbon scarfs that float backward from the neck; and the sleeves, which are wide, are also plaited and caught close at the wrist with bands of velvet ribbon—all in one shade of scarlet.

Voile Is Popular.

Starting with the most fragile version of sports dress, it is entertaining to follow along the line of designs and materials toward the more substantial sort. In this one type are following conservative lines. In one suit from this house the frock has the conventional straight bodice, with finely plaited skirt of the crepe. Bands of the crepe are stitched in V design on the front of the blouse and narrow bands stitched about the hips from the belt. The neck is cut in a rather low square, without a collar, and with the frock is worn a short tailored jacket of velveteen. The original model is made in rose beige crepe and brown velveteen, and will be equally smart in white crepe with black velveteen for the coat.

A bolero is shown in some of the latest French models, with delightful originality by Lelong, who presents the effect of a tiered bolero jacket. Lanvin's bolero is a veritable tunic, the jacket of black matching the skirt and is bound on the edges with

Sports Frock of White Crepe, Stitched in Scarlet, Button Trim.

white silk braid of which large motifs are made down the front and which is used to bind the top of the skirt in an unusual manner. This suit is worn over a blouse of finely plaited white mousseline. Chanel makes a long, very straight bolero in a sports costume of blue crepe marocain, and uses fine tucking of the crepe to trim the edge of the coat and to elaborate the skirt. The bolero tends rather to make of the sports dress something less strictly of the tailleur, and fits better the street dress or afternoon models. In either use the bolero, or the blouse which is varied to suggest a bolero, is almost invariably made of the same goods as the frock itself.

Combination of Materials.

Combination of two materials is engagingly illustrated in a two-piece sports suit from Madeline Vionnet in which she indulges her penchant for fine tucks—tucking the bodice diagonally, the skirt perpendicularly. A wide band of jersey cloth is added to the bottom of the skirt and about the hips, with a tailored bow at one side. Goupy has designed a swagger sports frock in black and white, the skirt of black crepe, the blouse of white pique forming a fitted yoke above the skirt, and the blouse belted with strap and buckle of pique. Lucien Lelong varies his design in sports dress in the artistic combination of several shades of one color. Drecoll responds to the craze for reptilian patterns by creating a sports suit which has a white crepe kilted skirt and a belted bodice of silk printed to imitate alligator skin. A scarf of crepe wound about the neck with ends floating at the back is embroidered in modernistic motifs. Martial et Armand use embroidery effectively on crepe sports suits.

A charming model is made of white crepe marocain with the modishly plaited skirt and a blouse jacket cut with the lower part snug about the hips, to which the upper section is attached to blouse slightly. The neck is collarless; and one large rever crosses to close at the side of the belt. The edges are embroidered all around both the jacket and the skirt hem. The plaits of the skirt are stitched down several inches from the top, and embroidery is used at the wrists and around the small cap-shaped hat of the crepe.

Buttons in Evidence.

Buttons for service or for trimming sports dresses are very much in evidence on frocks of different materials, and it is prophesied that they will be more generally used in the autumn. In a becoming little frock of the more elaborate sports type a straight, somewhat snugly fitting bodice of canton crepe is buttoned down the front to the line at which the skirt of mousseline is attached with a piping instead of a belt. This frock is collarless, the V neck being finished with piping and the point at which the waist line is indicated is higher than that in most sports models.

In two-piece sports suits many have the jumper blouse or sweater buttoned in a practical sort of way all the length, or with a few buttons in front or at one side.

Baby Now Worth $9,333

The fact that we live longer than did our grandfathers is bringing us billions of dollars in cash, says a great insurance company, whose experts estimate that the total increase in earning power of American men and women in the present generation, or since 1901, is $3,500,000,000. This gain, they declare in Popular Science Monthly, has been due largely to the extension of life.

In 1901 a baby boy at birth was considered to have a potential value of $7,553. By 1924 this value increased to $9,333. This gain also, they conclude, is due to expectation of longer life, with a consequent longer period of earning capacity.

Plants Grow More at Night

With the aid of special measuring apparatus, Prof. F. M. Andrews of Indiana university has found that the stalks of some plants grow more in the night than they do in the day, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The leaves showed as much development in the light as they did when the sun was down.

Use Fish as Illuminant

The candle fish is still being used by the Indians in some parts of British Columbia for illuminating purposes. After catching the candle fish, the Indians place them in a dry, sheltered place and wait till they have shrunk and all the water has evaporated from them. They then set the head or tail of the fish alight and use the carcass as they would a torch. There is so much oil in the carcass that it produces a bright, steady flame which burns slowly.

White-Crowned Sparrow

"Next to the meadowlark, no doubt, most people will vote the white-crowned sparrow the most fascinating singer of the Northwest. Often through the darkest night in the Virginia creeper or honeysuckle around the porch he utters his plaintive song—seemingly to say . . . 'Sweet, sweet, listen to me, won't you?'"—William Rogers Lord.

Just a Pasture-al Tale

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright.)

THE cow bell's distant tinkle broke suddenly into loud clappings, under-voiced by the thuddings of rapid hoofs. Peggy Lynn, in wait at the drawbars, listened, smiling happily, then began calling keen and mellowly: "Sook cow! Sook-ook! Sook-ook! Sook Blue-bell! Brandy! Well-Cow! Cherry! Lilac! Lady Luck! Sook-ook Sook-ook!"

Lucky they were coming thus early—half an hour ahead of sundown. It meant they were tight as drums with tender new grass and browse that by morning would be turned miraculously into foamy, creamy milk. Pastures got greener daily, still they didn't match the range along the creek—valley growth was always two weeks ahead of upland. Besides the creatures loved it so well that they had to be driven home, not called, the first few days. Also they had got tasty licks of bran-and-salt. Peggy and Jinny, her loyal helper, and after a sort, partner, had recklessly taken over the Lynn cows, not on shares as would have been safe, but upon a strict cash basis.

Peggy wanted real money in hand—the one very good thing she had ever lacked. Things came so easily she never had the fun of wanting them very, very badly. Henceforth she would buy or go without as she chose—of course keeping a tight rein on 'poor Jinny, whose supreme joy in a dollar was the wasting of it. This notwithstanding she had bought a bit of land, fairly dragged into it by Miss Peggy, and it was less than half paid for. Only a cabin—but it meant shelter for Jinny's flock. Isham, eldest of the lot, stood rope in hand before the calfpen whence already lusty howlings answered the mother-chorus of lowlings. Isham "kept off" calves—raising them was part of the game. A mighty profitable part when, as this season, they were all heifers that in twenty months would be fine young cows worth manyfold their cost in milk. Good stock all—returning a pound of butter, down-weight, daily.

Dusk fell before milking ended—with every cup and bucket brimming full, not to name extras. That meant churning twice all round next day—each cow's milk was kept separate. Troublesome—but worth it. Lynnbrook customers were glad to pay three times the market rate. Then there was the buttermilk, butter-flecked, almost as rich as cream—enough of it for all the black folk and white, the puppies and the youngest pigs. Often hot hoeecake went along with it—feeding the hungry was Peggy's dear delight.

It was partly that which made her deaf to the creamy man, who had pestered her, since he opened in March, to patronize him, saying: "Not quite so much money, maybe, until we're firm in the saddle; but—think of the trouble you'll miss and the pedigree pigs and calves you can raise on your skim milk."

This May twilight she was dreadfully tired. Her wrists ached, her hands cramped—the big milking had been too heavy a strain. As Isham put up the bars, after turning the calves in the pasture, a hail came across them—that pestilent fellow had come again. But on a different errand—in behalf of a friend who was planning to open an exclusive resort hotel in the foothills twenty miles off.

Accidentally he had tasted Peggy's butter—in result he was determined to have it, all she made—no matter about the price. Send for it every day—also for garden stuff, broilers, fruits, cake, strictly home-made. A fortune sure in any of them, once they had won their public.

"Let's talk it over at supper," Peggy conceded. The creamy man shook his head. "Better talk it out between you—I'll fetch him tomorrow," he said over his shoulder as he scuttled away.

Young Bruce, the hotel man, came, saw, but did not conquer—Peggy was too much in love with her work to think of quitting it. But she let herself be persuaded to help a bit by reporting to him over the telephone whenever she found things he might buy to his advantage. Thus they came to have a loose-woven comradeship, never guessing its strength until October. The break might not have come even then but for Jinny, who upon discovery that her sometime husband was real sure-enough dead and properly buried, said airily, "So now I'm gwine marry dat Jim Baxter who's been pestering me so long. So we'll hab ter dissolve dis yere partnership."

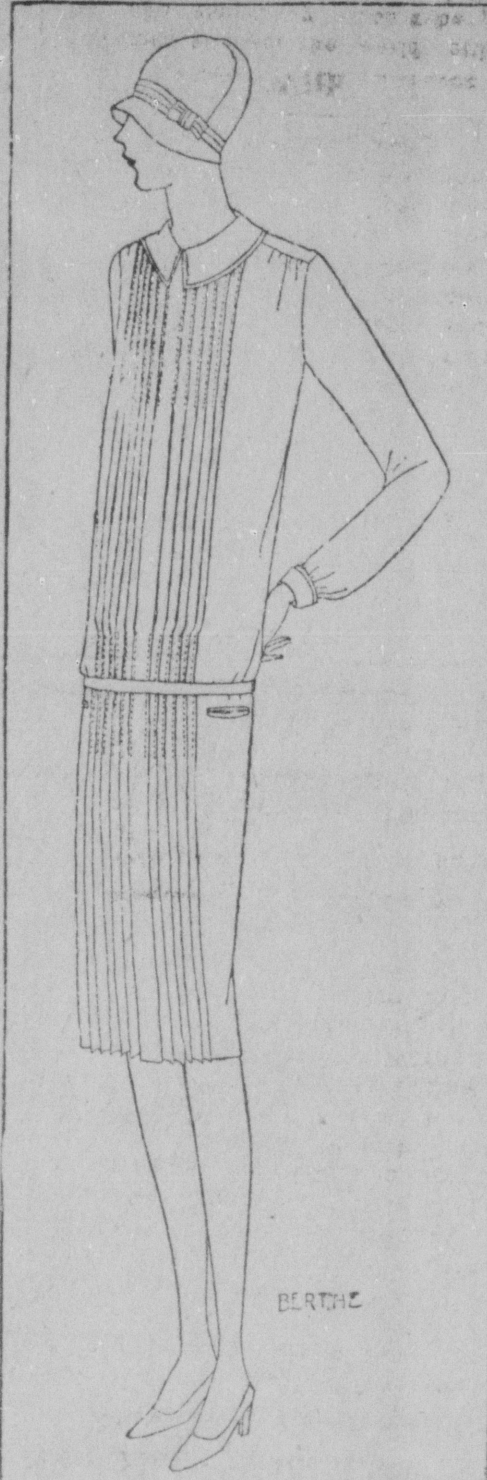

At that Peggy laughed hard—then with Jinny away sighed even harder. She had made money hand over hand—but oh, she was tired. Upon this mood of discouragement in walked Sidney Bruce, Esquire, armed with double determination, a string of pearls and a platinum ring no normal woman could possibly resist. Peggy, being strictly normal, did not try to resist. Instead she slid the circlet upon its proper finger deftly, twirled it about, flashed it in autumn sunshine, then said with her trickiest smile: "If I milk another month, I shan't be able to get it on." And she laid the pearls against her lips.

Sidney looked aggrieved. "I call that wicked waste," he said stiffly.

Peggy giggled, saying demurely: "I don't let things I want go to waste."

"Neither shall I—hereafter," Sidney said, catching her in his arms.

Smart Crepe de Chine Dress Is Easily Made

This smart crepe de chine dress, says the Woman's Home Companion, may be made with no trouble in a surprisingly short time. There's a choice of colors—beige, blue and white—to cover the summer vacation season and also navy and black if you need to think of the dress for the fall. A double collar and cuffs with the top layer of cream crepe de chine provide a becoming bit of contrast.

Wrong Choice of Color Can Wreck Appearance

The poor choice of color has an important influence on a woman's final appearance, points out Eileen Bourne in an article in Liberty Magazine. "There are countless women who could lift themselves out of the ranks of the ordinary by a better understanding of color."

"The woman of neutral coloring—with hair, eyes and skin of no particular brilliance," Miss Bourne explains, "needs warm color to inject life into her personality, such as henna, terra cotta, apricot, a blue somewhere in between the cold, hard shades and midnight. Women with florid complexions must avoid shades that have red or pink in them. Blonds with high color cheapen the effect with such shades as red, rose, bright pink, fuchsia or orange."

"There are muddy browns, purples, taupe and light, strong blues, that bring out every bad feature of skin and eyes, and that, combined with an unrelieved black, may add a dozen years to the woman who has no right to use them. Gray-haired women with that lovely blue light in their hair have to be supercritical in their color choice to avoid giving an ugly yellowish look to their heads."

New Hair Styles Both Puzzling, Contradictory

Contradictory fashion now provides for both long and short hair. Short hair or at least the appearance of short hair is given approval during daytime hours, while for evening the chignon is coming back to its own. Some meet this demand by letting the hair grow and wearing it in the daytime arranged so as to look bobbed. Others meet the situation with a wig. These wigs do not always follow the color of the hair beneath. White wigs are popular abroad, especially if they have either a certain pinkish or bluish tinge.

Hosiery Waterproofed, No More Rain, Mud Marks

Waterproof stockings have become popular with English women of fashion, and showers no longer cause rainmarks down the front of the stockings and mud splashes up the back. The waterproofing employed does not alter the appearance of the silk. Rain rolls off without leaving an impression and the application of a damp sponge removes mud stains. These stockings can be washed again and again without any ill effects.

Knitted Capes for Sports Wear

Knitted military capes for sports wear are much seen in Paris. One pretty model, much approved, has three colored stripes on the small turn-over collar. The cape itself is beige, or natural colored wool. The new capes carry out the ensemble idea. They are chosen to match either skirt or sweater worn under them.

Capes With Yokes

Women all over the world still wear the yoke, especially when the yoke is the distinguishing feature of the new capes, which will be a style development this spring.

SHORTAGE OF FUEL COMPELS AIR NAVIGATOR TO CONE DOWN

Dropped Down Thru a Dense Fog and Lands At Ver-Sur-Mer On North French Coast—Was In the Air Forty Hours—Went a Distance of 4200 Miles, 295 Miles Further Than Chamberlin Went To Germany.

Battered by storm and blinded by fog, with compass out of order and out of gasoline, the giant transatlantic monoplane of Commander Richard E. Byrd sped swiftly to the sea at Ver-Sur-mer, on the coast of Normandy, early Friday morning, valiantly completing its great transoceanic hop—but 175 miles west of its goal, Paris.

Not until virtually the last drop of gasoline was gone did the American argosy give up its determined groping in the impenetrable fog for the landing field at Le Bourget—a field that lay waiting eagerly for their arrival.

At 3:30 Friday morning, French time, after more than 40 hours in the air, the end of the heartbreaking suspense came.

"We had no choice but to seek a landing," Commander Byrd told a correspondent for the Associated Press. "I sent down a flare and then followed with the plane."

But there was more than that. The great plane which had leaped with such power from the runway at Roosevelt field in the early dawn of Wednesday, was still mighty in its final swoop to earth.

Landing in shallow water, it tore the wheels from the fuselage and plunged out 200 yards off the beach and then sank to the top of its wing in the booming surf.

It was then that Commander Byrd's painstaking foresight came into play and the rubber life raft that he had been so careful to test before hopping off proved its service. Clinging to their now helpless ship, the four American airmen succeeded in launching their raft and manning it, rowed quickly to shore.

Not content with simply assuring their own safety, the aviators, true to the tradition of their calling, made several trips to the plane to obtain their most important equipment, personal effects, a sack of mail and some of their precious records, although much valuable scientific data was lost to Commander Byrd's great disappointment.

They walked on the shore for two weary hours until they succeeded in getting in touch with fishermen who took them to the nearby lighthouse of Ver-sur-Mer and the home of the acting mayor, where they found food and much needed sleep.

Friday the great plane that had served them so well was dragged from the sea by fishermen and naval men from the port of Cherbourg under direction of two of the crew of the America. The engines were dismantled and carefully gone over, while every piece of equipment that could be saved was stowed away.

He sent out an SOS at 1:45 a. m. in hope that a plane would be sent up to guide him to Le Bourget field. He sent no other messages after that because, being unable to determine how near the ground the America was flying, he was afraid the trailing aerial would catch on a tree or roof.

As for the compass, principal cause of the inability to follow a direct route to Paris, it was the earth inductor one that went wrong, the commander said.

He had two others, which he styled ordinary mariners' compasses, but under existing conditions he was unable to navigate with them when the earth inductor ceased functioning.

Despite the failure of the America to reach Paris, two things stood out Friday night; the first was that if Commander Byrd's calculations are correct, the America covered a distance of 4200 miles, or 295 miles farther than Clarence D. Chamberlin and Charles A. Levine covered on their flight to Germany.

The second was the great skill displayed by the aviators in navigating the Atlantic in such weather as would have forced the captains of even the greatest liners to reduce speed and to grope their way thru the fog.

Only at rare intervals did they catch a glimpse of the threatening ocean below them thru fog and clouds. Yet they reached the coast of France in safety and only lost their way when their compass went back on them.

Friday night the American airmen are the heroes of all France and more than heroes to the little seaside town of Ver-Sur-mer, to which they brought the first breath of fame since a Spanish galleon, a remnant of the great armada that once plowed the seas toward England, crashed off the rocks there in 1583.

Commander Byrd and his three companions have joined Charles A. Lindbergh in his niche in the hearts of the French people. The courage with which they faced stupendous odds against them, the skill that carried them thru one of the worst nightmares that aviation history knows, and the splendid fight for life that they put in a howling storm while all France lay fog hidden beneath them as did the lonely dash of Lindbergh.

They failed to reach Paris—whether they passed over it in the darkness of the stormy night no one knows, not even Commander Byrd, although he thinks he may have, but they demonstrated to the satisfaction of the average man that the terrors of fog and rain—those great bugaboos of the air—are not so deadly as they once seemed.

But the greatest thing was—and that's all that really mattered to the man in the street—"they're safe and sound."

The came down over Ver-Sur-Mer with gasoline and oil tanks empty and compass out of gear after hours of maneuvering above the clouds for a sight of a landing place or any hole in the cloudbanks that might permit them to get their bearings.

is Cold and Cruel.

The barrage of words hurled back and forth between Charles Chaplin, film comedian and his estranged wife Lita Grey Chaplin, continued with unabated vigor Saturday in Los Angeles.

With thousands of words of accusations on each side already in court files, 61 closely typewritten pages consisting of Mrs. Chaplin's answer to her husband's cross complaint for divorce, were before superior court Saturday.

Mrs. Chaplin was a devoted young wife, she declared in her answer. Chaplin, she said, was a cold, cruel husband.

In Chaplin's cross bill filed a few days previously, he charged Mrs. Chaplin was a woman of the world while he was a home loving, hard working actor, anxious to return to his wife each evening after work.

None of Chaplin's complaints about her, however, were true, Mrs. Chaplin replied. She denied in much detail that she had even been friendly with other men "in the manner intimated by her husband."

Chaplin, she said, merely was inordinately jealous.

CHARLES JACK WILL PROBATED IN ROSS COUNTY

The last will and testament of the late Charles Jack, who prior to his death, was the cashier of the Ross county national bank, was admitted to probate Thursday. The will is dated February 7, 1919.

Item one of the will is the customary clause that all just debts against the estate and funeral expenses be paid.

Under the second item of the will the sum of $1,000 is bequeathed to a sister, Laura W. Jack. Item three contains a $1,000 bequest to a brother, William T. Jack.

All the rest and residue of the estate under item five, is bequeathed to the widow, Georgiana R. Jack, in fee simple. She is named as executor to serve without bond.

INVESTIGATE THE DEATH OF ALTON DAVIS

Young Men Had Accident
About Same Time, But
at Different Place.

Sheriff Davis is making an investigation as to the cause of the death of Alton Davis which occurred Sunday night on the Williamsport pike about one and a half miles east of New Holland.

The sheriff learned that Curtis Wagner and Hoadley Downing, both of Jackson township, had had an accident on the New Holland-Williamsport pike, and he interviewed them. The young men left New Holland a short time before the death was reported in the village. They admitted they were in a collision and claimed that about one and a half miles east of the point where Alton Davis lost his life they were run into by a Ford car which went on toward New Holland.

They were riding in Wagner's Buick automobile and when examined by Sheriff Davis, the fenders were badly damaged, a hanger on the engine was broken and the body of the car was badly scratched.

On the morning following the death of Alton Davis, the sheriff found, at the scene of the accident, a Buick hub cap. When the Wagner car was examined by the sheriff, it had on four hub caps, two old and two newer.

Alton Davis had driven some distance on the rim of one of the wheels and the missing tire was found on the New Holland pike, near the Cross roads from Atlanta to Dublin Hill.

The next meeting will be held at Mt. Pleasant church, Wednesday, July 6th. After the meeting games were enjoyed by all.

Synthetic Rubber

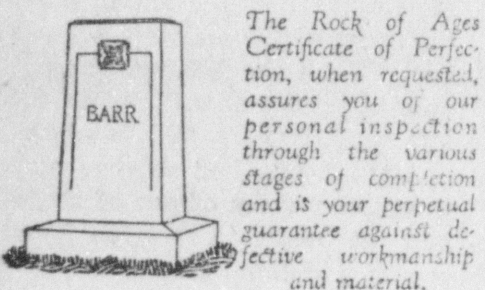

During the World War when Germany was cut off from supplies of crude rubber a great effort was made to produce synthetic rubber. Toward the close of the war about 150 tons of synthetic rubber were being produced monthly in Germany from isoprene derivatives, but the product was inferior to natural rubber and really served well only in hard-rubber goods. The industry ceased at the close of the war.

USE OF JACK

C. T. Wells, alias Mason and Caldwell, who is being sought by Pickaway county authorities and a private detective agency in connection with the burglarizing of the Friedman store at Circleville recently, is believed to be the man who entered Stocklin & Herrstein's hardware store here June 23 and escaped with knives and revolvers valued at $800.

Wells, an ex-convict, is linked with the Circleville burglary by the confessions of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Ivie, now being held in the Pickaway county jail. They intimate, it is understood, that Wells, after evading arrest at Hamilton may have returned here and stolen the knives and guns, articles which he had been asked to procure for an unknown "fence" in Cincinnati.

Mr. and Mrs. Ivie were arrested in Hamilton Thursday, the day before the burglary at the local hardware store. Wells was with the couple but succeeded in escaping arrest.

Local police are interested in the case from the Chillicothe angle, and Police Chief Maughmer and Bank Detective George Hamm went to Circleville this week and interviewed the Ivies, learning, it is understood, that Wells often employs a jack to gain entrance to stores. It was using a jack that the barred second story window of the local hardware store was opened.

Furthermore, the police learned from the Ivies, that Wells had remarked to them while in Hamilton, preceding their arrest, that he had an order for knives and guns in Cincinnati. Wells has been in Chillicothe many times, it is said, and is well acquainted with the layout of local stores.

Earl Ivie and Wells served time together in the Jefferson, Indiana, pen, it is understood, and that upon their release bought a Reo speed wagon to use in making wholesale robberies of stores. The Ivies had the truck and part of the Friedman loot with them when arrested.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

Leaves on Apple Trees

Tests made at the Arlington farm by government horticulturists showed that at least 30 to 40 medium-sized leaves per fruit were necessary to obtain apples of good size and quality. When a smaller number of leaves was present, the fruit was not only smaller in size, but was low in dry weight, low in sugar content and of poor dessert quality.

Sunspots First Seen

The first recorded observation of sunspots is found in the journal of Henry Hudson on his voyage across the Atlantic in 1609. The observation is dated May 21. It was more than a year later that Harriot and Galileo observed this phenomenon.

BRILLIANTS

Have a hobby and dismiss ennui.

Science covers a lot of ignorance.

Toot your own horn; but be brief.

Perfection is a state we never reach.

Children bring mud and new slang into the house.

One oughtn't to kiss babies; but babies are so pretty.

Sooner or later the finger of scorn comes to the point.

Many a woman studies her glass to the neglect of her heart.

There are still many ministers who practice what they preach.

See how far you can make a dollar go. That's another pastime.

If a girl has teeth like pearls she's never as dumb as an oyster.

As a general thing, the more friends a man has the fewer he needs.

Men are willing to change their minds if it means no loss to them.

Take a day off occasionally and your years will accumulate more slowly.

Life is worth living, if only to gratify your curiosity about this universe.

If success doesn't turn the average man's head it's because he has a stiff neck.

Many a man puts everything in his wife's name, even including his peace of mind.

There is no such thing as a good man gone wrong. It's just a bad man found out.

There is one fact we cherish: We never said "no" when a boy wanted to go to the circus.

It is better to inspire the heart with a noble sentiment than to teach the mind a truth of science.—Brooks.

GREAT TRUTH, BUT REALLY NOT NEW

"Men are funny." That's not such an unusual statement as to be startling. The startling part about the observation is that a man made it—a man who, in his daily task of giving shaves and haircuts, has plenty of opportunity to know whereof he speaks.

"In the old days before women invaded my shop," explained the barber, "men would come in and sometimes wait as much as two hours for their turn in the chair. Now, because I have so much feminine trade, some of my work is by appointment.

"If a man comes in on chance and has to wait for some one who comes in after him, but who has an appointment, he's so disgruntled he's likely not to come back. And probably he's waited only a half hour. It isn't the wait—it's the fact that some one comes in after him with the privilege of going ahead of him. Yes, men are funny."—Philadelphia Record.

Too Smart

"Well, sir, my ten children have got the mumps, and when you are 'way down the road you can hear 'em mumpin'," said Lufe Lagg of Bogger Holler.

"Pshaw!" returned the traveler to whom the news was related, "you can't hear the mumps. You—"

"I can't, can't I? If I wasn't settin' down comf'able yur in the shade you wouldn't dare call me a liar! But, anyhow, Junior, you better fetch me my gun; this yur gent is too devilish smart."—Kansas City Star.

Sugar Be Praised

Dr. Woods Hutchinson finds health in the sugar bowl habit. Pitying our forefathers, he says they obtained their carbohydrates, not in granulated sweetness, but in cannon-ball dumpings, loaded with chunks of fat, spices and sour prunes, which they called plum pudding. Small wonder, he says, those dumpling-eating pioneers awoke with a head like a concertina, and a mouth like a lime kiln.

Unemployed Must Study

Single men under thirty and married men under twenty-five years must regularly attend the school for unemployed conducted by Salford guardians, in England, if they wish to draw the unemployment dole. Arithmetic, English, drawing and woodwork are among the subjects taught.

Patriotic Answer

The children of the third grade were having an examination in history. One of the questions asked was, "Why do we celebrate the Fourth of July?"

One little boy answered, "Because it was the day God was 'borned.'"

Within Means

Tom—The alligator can live six months without food.
Harry—Fine. That's just the kind of a pet I could afford.

Liberal allowance for your old cleaner

You won't have to postpone owning a Greater Hoover until your old, inefficient cleaner is completely useless. You can know the joy of Hoover cleaning immediately. You can have the aid of the Hoover all through these summer months, when the daily burden of blown-in dust is so great and Hoover helpfulness means so much.

Just call us on the phone. We'll make an appraisal of your old machine—without the slightest charge or obligation—and give you a generous allowance for it on the purchase of your new Hoover.

Just think what a difference

having the Hoover is going to make in your enjoyment of the summer! Think of the extra time you'll have for rest—the extra vitality you'll have for play—if the Hoover is relieving you of the burden of cleaning—and doing it better than it's ever been done before.

"Positive Agitation," the revolutionary cleaning principle of the Greater Hoover, sets a new standard of home cleanliness. If you don't know the untold difference which this amazing principle makes in cleaning, you owe it to yourself to have a Hoover demonstration. Only $6.25 down, balance monthly, if you wish to purchase.

It pays to know the difference between the HOOVER and a vacuum cleaner

You can now get "Positive Agitation" in a new popular-priced Hoover model. Ask us about it.

SAYS UNITED STATES
Can Use Good Points of All Peoples.

The United States has need of all the fine qualities of all the peoples that go to make up its polyglot population, declares an editorial in this week's Liberty. "Since the feat of Charles Lindbergh inspired the youth of the world as perhaps no other feat of modern times has done," the editorial points out, "we have heard a great deal about the triumph of the Nordic spirit and its value to the United States. "We need the Nordic," the editorial asserts, "but would an over-whelming majority of Scandinavians be desirable? With all their admirable qualities, peoples from cold, sunless countries are inclined to be dour and severe. Is it not desirable, from a purely American standpoint, to mellow the sternness and dourness of the Nordic with the lightheartedness and emotion of the Viennese, the music and mirth of the Italian, who, though digging in the ditch, will spend his last dollar to sit in the gallery to hear his beloved grand opera. "These, too, have contributed largely," the editorial continues, "to the making of what we call the American race. Each adopted American has brought to us something good for all. All are good, and each has a separate value. We would be sorry to exclude any of these who furnish new vitality to the nation."

Writings in Blank Verse
Blank verse is unrhymed verse, depending on meter alone. The earliest example of blank verse in England is a translation from Latin of Virgil's masterpiece, "Aeneid," which appeared in 1547. Milton's great poem, "Paradise Lost," is written in blank verse.

'DEAD' TOWN NOW
IS GOLD CENTER
Veteran Kept Secret for 24 Years; Now Controls Entire Strike.

Summitville, Colo.—Dead and deserted for many years, Summitville is on the golden threshold of a new birth. Its western hills again are yielding the precious metal as a result of the faith that John Pickens, veteran miner, kept secret for 24 years. Once the outpost of an advancing gold rush, Summitville late in the last century became a thriving village of 1,500 souls, with the attendant dance halls, saloons and gambling houses. Then came the slump. The veins "petered out." Prospectors pulled their stakes and sought richer fields, and Summitville became another of Colorado's ghost towns. Its once pretentious buildings crumbled into decay.

Veteran Absorbs Claims.
Pickens never lost faith, however, and yearly returned to the hills. For 24 years he quietly and slowly went about obtaining title to the once—and again—valuable lands. Now, with Judge Jesse C. Wiley of Del Norte, he bids fair to become this state's latest mining millionaire. Every foot of land in the famous old camp, as well as acres surrounding it, belongs to Pickens and Wiley. The new El Dorado does not bid to outsiders. The discovery of the fabulous gold strike from which Pickens and Wiley already have received more than $100,000—259 pounds of ore paying them $16.032 at the Omaha smelter—was accidental. In 1902 while crossing a wash near the Little Annie mine, where he was employed, Pickens found a piece of ore about half the size of a man's head. A few days later he found a small butte, which he identified as the place from whence the original find apparently had been carried by the elements. Exposure had caused moss to form over the vein and it was difficult to detect the vein from common rock.

Kept Find a Secret.
Pickens kept the find to himself until last summer. Having obtained the required leases, he was accompanied by his son and another man, each armed with a pick, and removal of the ore was started. The butte being inaccessible for nearly nine months of the year, Pickens and his two workers labored during the three summer months, and aside from the ore which they have sold, removed more than 25 tons which lies sacked behind barricaded doors awaiting transportation. Summitville is in the San Juan mountains, long famous for yielding precious ores, and is approximately 40 miles southwest of Del Norte and about 250 miles southwest of Denver.

Trace of Prehistoric Race in Black Hills
Pierre, S. D.—Did a prehistoric race, who builded of stone at some time, make its home in the Black Hills of South Dakota? Or is the formation only a peculiar freak of nature, is what Donald Crabtree is attempting to prove by excavation at a point several miles south of Rapid City, near the state game lodge, where President Coolidge will have his summer home. Mr. Crabtree, with a force of men, has been working for some time on what is called a wall, built of stone laid in regular order with broken joints as bricks are laid. This has been uncovered for a distance of more than 100 feet, at which location another like "wall" was found running at right angles with the first find, and this is being explored to a greater extent.

Police Instructed to Help Motorists
Toledo, Ohio.—Chief J. H. Bilkey has turned the town of South Euclid into a sort of paradise for motorists who don't care to smash speed records and who drive cars only when their breaths are unscented by alcohol. Chief Bilkey has issued orders that every man on the police force is to lend a helping hand to autolists in distress. If you have tire trouble a policeman will help you change. If you run out of gas a policeman will bring fuel, if it is necessary. If your radiator is boiling a policeman will help fetch water. If the old bus won't run a policeman will help you push it to the nearest garage.

MARSHALL-BOTKIN.
The marriage of Dr. Clyde Slocombe Marshall and Frances Rebecca Botkin took place at the home of Drs. C. T. and Margaret Curti, friends of the bride, on Friday, June 17, 1927, at four o'clock p. m. Only the Drs. Curti, the bride and groom and the minister were present. The party of five enjoyed a delicious six o'clock dinner at the Curti home. After dinner the bride and groom were driven by the bride's college friends, Dr. and Mrs. Sheffield to their beautiful farm home between Northampton and Boston, where they remained two days. From there they went to Boston, staying over night at the new Parker House. The next morning they sailed from Boston to Yarmouth, then later on to Halifax, Nova Scotia, to visit the family of the groom. Since 1910 the bride has made her home mostly with Mr. and Mrs. T. G. Hall at Lincoln, where she could have educational advantages, spending much time during the summers with her father and aunts, C. W. Botkin, Mrs. Jennie Newman and Miss S. Frances Botkin. During her educational work she has made unusual strides, rising to first honors on her graduation from the Lincoln High schools and the Nebraska State University. She attended the University of Nebraska a fifth year and received her master's degree. At this time, she accepted a free scholarship to the University of Chicago and before much more than a year's work there a visiting committee from Smith college selected her to be an instructor in their psychology department. She has taught five years at that college and will teach there one year more. During the past two years she has been assistant professor in her department. The groom was born and reared at Halifax, Nova Scotia, where he graduated from Dalhousie University, receiving his Ph. D. degree later at Boston. Besides being an M. D. he has been employed for some time at the Massachusetts Neurological Institute, as a psychiatrist. The couple will be engaged at the Boston psychopathic hospital during the months of July and August after which they will take an apartment at Northampton for one year. At the end of the 1928 term the bride's relatives and friends may be able to enjoy another visit from her and form opinions of her learned sheik, whom she will surely fetch along. After all the bride's friends have gone to the places they have contemplated visiting, they may go to Halifax. But not until 1929, when they shall have established a home in that beautiful city.—The Gothernburg, Neb., Times.

PROTECTS THE HOME IN SUMMER

A Lantern Over the Doorway
Keeps Intruders at a Distance.

LIGHTLY fastened screen doors and open windows with screens in them, the usual condition of most homes in summer, present a problem to family heads when they desire to leave the house alone for a brief while in the evening.

The surest safeguard against intrusion is, of course, to bar the outer doors and lock the windows down, but that results in a hot house greeting one on one's return.
Yet, with the average house comparatively "wide open" in the summer months, care should be taken to avoid the appearance of its being totally unguarded. This, for the family without a servant or with one who is away at night, is a vexatious question, but it is best answered by the use of exterior lighting, such as an outside lantern, swinging light or wall light, illuminated by a button from within and kept burning as late as one is absent from home.

Thieves, like wild animals, fear light. They seldom molest places so illuminated, due to their natural supposition that some one is at home. And the average sneak thief, contrary to popular impression, is not, on the word of experienced police officials, so brave-hearted as to court danger and discovery.

Exterior lighting equipment has in addition to its service as a safety measure, the added virtue of beautifying the exterior of the home, and, not only in summer but throughout the year, extends a

A Lantern alight is a good watchman in the "screen-door season."

cheery welcome to friends, while at the same time warning all others of the presence within of some one.
The custom of using outdoor lights, to illumine porch, piazza or entrance, is an old custom which is again finding favor in America.
Architects generally advise control of the lighting from the inside of the house, as this makes it handy to light up the entrance before opening the door.

*"The way was long, the night was cold,
The ballet girl was growing old,
So she bought sardines with her hard-earned pelf
And had a can-can all to herself."*

THIS doggerel was written many years ago. Jazz dances have replaced the can-cans, but sardines have retained their popularity, and there are now many new varieties of canned food to comfort the ballet girl.

Strange as it may seem, there is no such thing as a "sardine." Fish known as sardines, are small pichard minnows abounding in Mediterranean waters and were called sardines because they were first canned on the island of Sardinia. Sprats, mussels, sild fish, all belonging to the herring family, are packed in various countries throughout the world as sardines. It isn't the fish that matters so much as the way in which it is canned. The French canners put oil, truffles, and other dressings with the fish, and pack them very closely into the cans. Most of the canners use olive oil alone.

The California small sardines resemble the Mediterranean species more than any fish of the same type in other parts of the world. Since 1905, however, Southern California canners have been putting up a larger variety combined with tomato sauce in one-pound oval tins, and these have become popular.

The large oval can has several advantages, a very obvious one being that it contains enough fish for a whole family. In college dormitories, too, where sardines have always been popular for impromptu feasts, the new style of can is recommended as being the most economical.

dent appetites—and also to student purse, for, comparatively speaking, the price of the oval can of sardines is in inverse ratio to its size.

So, though their salty, meaty taste is superlatively appetizing, sardines need no longer be relegated to the lesser place for an hors d'oeuvre. Anyone has only to try the two following dishes to discover that sardines are now canned are more than an accessory.

Duchesse Potatoes with Sardines.— Boil potatoes, mash, and mix salt and pepper, and beat until creamy. Make a large oval mound of them on a platter of oven glass. Sprinkle grated cheese over the potato, and surround it with small pieces of toast on which are laid evenly the contents of a large oval can of sardines, halved lengthwise and boned. Put the platter under the broiler just long enough to melt the cheese. Serve with this dish finely shredded cabbage well mixed with mayonnaise dressing, a pinch of salt being added, and on top a generous sprinkling of paprika.

Broiled Sardines on Toast.—Remove the contents from a large oval tin of sardines, place them on a broiler and broil them for about three minutes. Butter the toast and then spread it with a very thin coating of mustard. Place the sardines on the toast and serve immediately.

All who value their health should live on light diets during the summer. For these the great refuge is the salad, all kinds of salads. Sardines are a most useful part to a salad, as their spicy flavor leads to a larger consumption of leafy foods. The following suggestions are made for using them:

Sardines in Tomato Jelly.—Strain
the juice from a large can of tomatoes. Dissolve two tablespoons gelatine in half a cup of boiling water and add this with teaspoon of paprika, half a teaspoon of onion juice, and salt and pepper to taste. Add these to the tomato juice, simmer five minutes in double boiler. Strain through cheese cloth. Pour half the mixture into a ring mold and let it partially set. Then put in sardines that have been skinned and pour in the rest of the mixture. When firm turn out on a platter and fill the hole in the center with mayonnaise and garnish
the outer edge with lettuce leaves.

Sardine Salad.—Shred half a lettuce, chop three sticks of celery, skin, bone and break into pieces the contents of a large oval tin of sardines.
Combine with mayonnaise dressing and serve on lettuce leaves.

Sardine and Egg Salad.—Cut into pieces three hard-boiled eggs and the contents of one large oval tin of sardines. Combine with mayonnaise dressing and serve on lettuce leaves and sliced radishes.

Picnic Sandwiches.— Mash large sardines after skinning and boning them, mix with mayonnaise dressing and chopped cucumber pickle. Spread between rye or graham bread.

Lives Long With One Lung

When eighteen, a girl of Coningsby, England, was told by her doctor that she had lost the use of one lung. She celebrated her one hundredth birthday recently. She has been blind for nineteen years, but is cheerful and apparently in good health.

French Reign of Terror

The Reign of Terror was the period in France beginning about March, 1793, when the revolutionary tribunal was appointed, and ending in July, 1794, with the overthrow of Robespierre and his associates. During this time a great number of persons, principally of the aristocracy, were executed.

IS GOING UP
CENTURY MARK

Friday night was a sizzler and very little comfort resulted from the slight precipitation that fell about one o'clock Saturday morning and more rain is promised. The heat wave is general thruout the county with a number of heat prostrations in the cities. Scippo and Dewey park did a land office business as both swimming resorts were patronized liberally.
The kids cooled off in Hargus, Darby and Hominy creeks. Their bathing suits were not the same as those used at the fashionable bathing resorts, but its dollars to doughnuts, they enjoyed the splash as much,
even tho they were dressed in sunshine and smiles.

IN MEMORIAM

Editor Union-Herald:— Sarah J.
Berger, daughter of David and Susanna Stout Pontius, was born in Washington township, Pickaway county, Ohio, September 30, 1856.

She was baptized in infancy and at the proper age by the rite of confirmation, became a member of the Evangelical Lutheran church at East Ringgold, of which church, she remained a consistent member to the time of her death, which occurred on Monday morning, June 27, 1927, at the age of 70 years, eight months and 27 days.

She was united in marriage to Eli Heffner June 16, 1876. To this union was born one daughter, Corella, wife of Charles C. Heffner, of Walnut township. The husband and father was accidentally killed May 18, 1877.
October 25, 1881, she was united in marriage to Franklin P. Berger, who preceded her to the home beyond August 8, 1925.

There are left to mourn her passing her daughter, Mrs. C. C. Heffner of Walnut township; one brother, W.
H. Pontius, one niece, Mrs. Clarence Ater and one nephew, Leland Pontius all of this city, and a host of friends and acquaintances, many of whom ministered to her during her two years illness and affliction.

Mrs. Berger will long be remembered for her life of kindly deeds, her sympathy and help always going out to those in distress. She fell asleep, we believe with full confidence of her peace, with her God. She was laid to rest beside her husband in the Berger mausoleum in Reber Hill cemetery.

Those attending the funeral from out of the city, were Mr. and Mrs. G.
A. Stout and son, of Delaware, Ohio;
Mr. and Mrs. Elmer C. Tobias and Mrs. Anna Fisher, of Cleveland; Mr.
and Mrs. D. A. Heffner, Mr. and Mrs.
O. M. Heffner and Mrs. Almeda Anderson, of Columbus; Mr. and Mrs.
Grant Dildine and daughter and Mr.
Delno Berger, of Groveport; Mr. and Mrs. Willard Barch, of Duvall; Mr. and Mrs. G. A. Hook and family, Mr.
and Mrs. Irvin Swayner, Mr. Emanuel Berger and son, Mrs. E. A. Snyder, of Ashville; Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook and Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Kennedy, of Amanda, and Mr. and Mrs.
Oscar Myers, of Stoutsville.

Card of Thanks.

We take this means of expressing our appreciation and extend our thanks to our neighbors and friends for the many acts of kindness and words of sympathy, also for the many beautiful floral tributes on the occasion of the sickness and death of our mother and sister. Also to Rev.
Smith for his comforting words and to Mr. C. E. Hill for the splendid and efficient manner in handling the funeral arrangements.

HORSE ON MAIL
ROUTE 21 YEARS

Old Bay Mare Still Gives Faithful Service.

Kokomo, Ind.—The old bay mare is still what she used to be, 20 long years ago.

Daisy is twenty-three. Ever since she was two she has traveled a rural mail route out of Kokomo. She has seen her equine kin give way to motorized service, and she has tilted an ear sky-ward at the hum of an airmail plane, rattling from New York to Chicago in less time than it takes Daisy to make her little circuit twice a day.

But Daisy disdains the thought that any motor car or airplane could take her place. She could almost deliver the mail alone.

She is credited by Ben Boughman, her present owner, with having twice saved his life, when he failed to see trains at grade crossings.

Throughout the years Daisy has pulled the same tiny and ancient mail cart with which she started. She has lost but 18 days at work, and that because she hurt a leg in the line of duty.

The carrier who trained Daisy is long since dead, but the horse passed to succeeding carriers without a break in her service record.

Faithfully she plods around her route, and when she gets home she refuses to go another step. When her owner loiters on the homeward trip, Daisy goes on home to supper and lets her master leg it.

She has one complex. Circus day has scared her ever since the ring-master rode down Main street ahead of the parade shouting "Hold your horses, the elephants are coming."
When the big top is spread in Kokomo, Daisy is skittish all day.

Right now Daisy is on her annual vacation. Each summer she spends an outing in a familiar pasture. But she'll be back at the old grind in the fall.

FARMER COMES TO TOWN

"I wish to buy some stocks and bonds. Nothing speculative. Public utility stuff preferred."
"Aren't you the farmer I boarded with last summer?"
"I am."
"Beg pardon, but last summer you talked dialect."
"That was for the summer boarders, my friend. I am talking finance now."

Her Come-Back

He—Now that we are married, perhaps I might venture to point out a few of your little defects.
She—Don't bother, dear. I am quite aware of them. It was those little defects that prevented me from getting a much better man than you are.

Sidewalk Conversation

"Pardon me, madam," said the polite motorist, "I splashed one of your stockings."
"Would you kindly splash the other one?"
"Why?"
"I prefer them to match."

Simple Justice

"Kilty or not kilty?" the old German justice said to a man charged with stealing a barrel of coal oil.
"Not guilty, yer honor," said the man.
"Den vat you vant here?" said the old justice fiercely. "Go on away about your peezeess!"

SHE'D BRIBE THEM

He—Do you think she'd tip the scales at a hundred and fifty pounds?
She—Yes, she'd actually bribe them if she could.

Some Credit in That

Boasting's a thing most men despise; But if you have that bent, Better to boast about your rise Than brag of your descent.

Extremity

"Edith is able to get money from the man she married without asking for it."
"Lucky woman!"
"Well, perhaps. She had to divorce him to accomplish it."

Ruinous

Mrs. Crawford—Is that all you have left of the beautiful dinner set you got as a wedding present?
Mrs. Crabshaw—Yes; the breaks were against me.

Enough Said

Mr. Brewer—You had beauty and brains when I married you, Jane.
Mrs. Brewer—Well, I had beauty, but I couldn't have had brains, John.

GODD FOR EXTRA SHOTS

He—Why does she have all her pins in the form of arrows?
She—So that Cupid will have plenty of ammunition, I suppose.

Fear the Band

We have a brand new radio. And folks, 'tis simply grand To turn a little dial or two, And hear a whole string band.

Out of the Ring

Bill—What's all the noise over there?
Ted—Oh, Battling Bloke, the fighter, is having a tooth pulled.

Most Direct Way

Ted—When did you first get acquainted with Bill?
George—The first time I tried to borrow some money.

Style Changes In Tomatoes

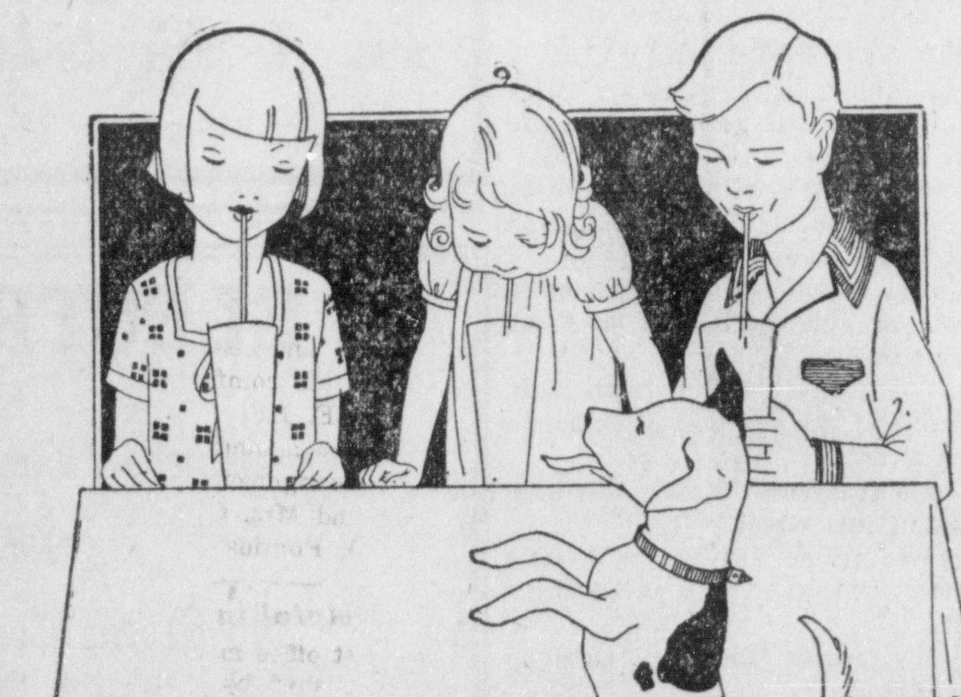

THE tomato has worn many garbs during its four hundred years of appearing on the tables of Europe and America. First it was used raw. As soon as it was discovered that it tasted good when cooked, there came into existence for the delectation of millions of consumers that good old-fashioned dish, stewed tomatoes.
How seldom do we see stewed tomatoes on a menu now! The stew has become a scallion, a soufflé, a tomato omelet. Canned tomato is used in a dozen new ways in dishes where it is the main ingredient, and as an accessory to other dishes.
Latterly, the juice strained from canned tomatoes has become popular with many people as a summer drink, either between meals or at the beginning of a meal. In some of the best-known health resorts a pitcher of tomato juice is kept on the table.
Tomato-Egg Aspic—Blend a can of tomatoes with a can of beef bouillon, seasoning with salt, pepper, celery and onion salt. Soak gelatine in one-fourth cup of the liquid. Allow the proportion of gelatine indicated on the package to each one and a quarter cups of liquid. Bring the remaining mixture to a boil and dissolve gelatine in it, then allow to cool. Cut six hard-boiled eggs in two, remove the yolks, and mix them with mayonnaise, then replace in the whites and put the halves together, laying the eggs around a circular mold. Pour the cooled tomato-bouillon mixture over them and chill. Fill the center of the mold, when service is desired, with finely shredded cabbage, generously mixed with mayonnaise dressing.

ONE of the advantages of a buffet luncheon is that the number of guests to be invited is not limited by the size of the dining-table. The center table will hold hot buttered biscuits, cake, almonds, candy, and coffee service.
A still greater advantage is the ease with which such an affair may be carried out. On a sudden inspiration the hostess may telephone her friends in the morning and, if she has a liberal and varied supply of canned foods on her shelf, she can have luncheon ready without undue hurry by noon. If she serves it on her broad piazza, the occasion will be informal and delightful.
This menu will prove valuable: First a fruit cocktail made of canned grapefruit, crushed pineapple, orange and maraschino cherries. Second, a salad course made in the following way: Spread shredded lettuce on each plate, cover the center with chopped celery, and around this place a ring of stringless beans and peas. On top of the celery put tuna fish broken into pieces, and in the very center a small pickle. On one side place a mound of chopped beets, and one of mayonnaise dressing.
For dessert an apricot ice cream may be quickly and easily made, if one has a can of apricots on the shelf.

A Cool Summer Drink

EXPERIENCE and scientific study have demonstrated that milk is the only food for which there is no effective substitute. It is high in protein, contains all the known vitamins, and is so constituted as to enhance the nutritive value of other foods. It is one of the so-called "protective foods," and medical authorities recommend that everyone take a daily portion of milk.
But, as some people are not fond of drinking milk plain, it is necessary for them to consume their daily quota in soups, sauces, custards, ice cream, cocoa, or disguised in other ways. One of the newer and more delightful modes is to add to milk, hot or cold, two or three teaspoonsful of one of the chocolate malted milk products. These are in powder form, and should be added to the top of the milk and beaten into it with an egg-beater. The more beating the better, for the liquid is thus vitalized with oxygen.
Children like to drink chocolate malted milk through a straw as it foams invitingly in a tall glass. In winter they take it hot; in summer ice-cold; and for dessert they ask sometimes to have chocolate or vanilla ice cream added to it. It then becomes what a soda counter artist would call "a chocolate malted milk shake with ice cream."
Invalids welcome this variation to their restricted diet; the man or woman who comes home tired after a hard day is renewed in cheerfulness and energy by a glass of this wholesome drink. Either as part of a meal or as an extra, chocolate malted milk is a tempting, highly nutritious food; a real body-builder.

AMUSEMENTS

The misadventures of a rookie postman will be revealed for the first time in motion pictures when Eddie Cantor's latest Paramount comedy, "Special Delivery" opens at the Met theater Monday for a three days engagement.

In this second of his starring vehicles under the Paramount banner the former Broadway comedian and star of "Kid Boots" once more presents himself, as he did in his first picture, as the exponent of those who labor in the field of public service. Cantor's postman goes from one ludicrous experience to another, gets into all sorts of hilarious situations and out of them again, but thru it all he is human, helpful and lovable.

Funny as these situations are, amusing as Cantor is in his letter carrier role, underlying all of the fun is a note of sincerity that makes one laugh with rather than at the subject of his mirth.

Cantor's postman, as he trudges the streets laden with letters and packages, is a pathetic figure who enlists one's sympathy.

When he lugs a squalling baby around for an hour while waiting for a forgetful mother to return and when in the purposeful pursuit of duty he insists upon taking a special delivery letter to the dressing room of the addressee and gets into all sorts of difficulties back stage, finally to blunder out onto the stage of a packed theater during the progress of the show the fun waxes uproarious.

Thru all the comedy, however, runs a strong thread of a completely worked out story. There's the girl with whom the postman is in love and for whose affections he vies with the Cop on the Beat and the Fireman from Station 12. There's the get-rich-quick specialist who is using the mails to defraud and who smoothly works his way into confidence of the girl and persuades her to accompany him, on promise of marriage, in his gateway to South America, only to be frustrated after a thrilling chase by Cantor.

Supporting Eddie Cantor in "Special Delivery" is a well balanced cast including Jobyna Ralston, for three years Harold Lloyd's leading woman, William Powell, Jack Dougherty, Donald Keith, Victor Potel, Paul Kelly and Mary Carr. William Goodrich directed.

In August I was in Wales, to see for the first time the Royal Welsh Eisteddfod, a gathering of Welsh culture that goes back to the Twelfth century for its birthday, or even earlier. I should think that ten or even twenty thousand were here for the ancient Druid festival, to listen to the poems and songs that Old-World harpists set waving on the air. The chief choral prize, as heretofore, is open to the world. To hear the leading choirs of the British Isles in the open air at such an event provides a memory that will not soon pass away. It is an Olympic of song. If you want to enjoy quaint costumes and scenic effects reminiscent of a thousand years of a small nation's art and music, then the Eisteddfod, with its gowned druids, tall-hat women harpists, banners inscribed with mystic Celtic symbols, with its bards touching the ancient sword of peace or blowing Hira's horn, is the festival for any summer visitor to old Wales.—From "My European Excursions," by Robert Petre.

Still View Lenin's Corpse

So well was the body of Lenin embalmed that thousands still view its lifelike lineaments daily at Moscow, though his death occurred several years ago. Recently the authorities were accused of substituting a wax figure for the corpse. They sent for a German scientist to open the case and prove to the public it was really Lenin's body. While in power Lenin tried to suppress all religion. Now the religious Russians whisper that the devil himself is preserving Lenin's body that he may burn it later.

Idea Is a Good One

"It is an excellent practice to carry money always in more than one pocket," says a writer in an exchange. This is a commendable idea, fellows. Carry plenty of money at all times in every pocket. Nothing is a surer guarantee against embarrassment than 12 or 14 pockets full of money.—Boston Transcript.

Old Geographical Titles

The kingdom of the Two Sicilies, former kingdom of Italy, comprised Naples, or southern Italy, and the island of Sicily. The name "Kingdom of Naples" was often also used. In the Middle Ages the southern part of the Italian mainland came to be known as "Sicily on this side of the Faro" (the strait of Messina).

"I hear you want a new car," said the automobile salesman who had managed to sneak into old man Black's office.

"No, I don't," snapped the old man, but my wife does, and she also wants a trip to Europe, a million dollars and fifty pounds off her weight, and she has just as much chance of getting a new car as she has any of the others. The way you came in takes you out, make your going snappy."

Too Hot-Headed

Critic—You have made your hero too hot-headed, I'm afraid.

"Ah, you are the young man in question? What's your name?"

"Ivan Auszeichnungecugtekl."

"How do you spell it?"

"As it is pronounced!"—Pele Mele, Paris.

All Off

He—True, my salary is not large, but then, two can live as cheaply as one.

She—But, Tom, dear, you forget—there's mother.

Wise

Ted—I saw my doctor about my loss of memory.

Jerry—What did he do?

Ted—Made me pay in advance.

Economy

Visitor—How is it that you have a picture of just one of the twins.

Mrs. Thrifty—They both look exactly alike, so what's the difference?

Watch Your Woolens!

With the summer season, the moth miller is abroad hunting a good place to lay her eggs. She prefers woolens as a good place to deposit her eggs, for there will be good feeding for her young.

Keep the cover on your upholstered furniture, brushed at least once each week, remove all cushions, and use your electric cleaner now and then. DO NOT COVER YOUR FURNITURE WITH COVERS. The young moth will crawl thru the covering and destroy your coverings before you are aware of their presence.

Place your woolen clothing and blankets in a moth-proof chest and cease to worry. We have just received a large shipment of "Treasure Chests" lined inside with red cedar, with walnut on the outside. They are beautifully finished and will add greatly to the beauty of the room, as well as serve as a protection to your clothing.

Priced from $16.50 up

Haven't you often wished that you had a folding chair to take with you on picnics and camping tours? We have some that are very fine for that purpose. They fold up into a small space, yet are comfortably lazy. They are very handy around the house when guests arrive, especially for use on the porch. They are strong, holding the largest persons, and yet are low priced.

CLARK L. GRONINGER'S

Son Drowned In Scioto River Near Chillicothe.

Caught in the treacherous undercurrents of the Scioto river at Kilgore bridge, James Groninger, young son of C. L. Groninger, 330 McKellar street, was drowned shortly after noon.

A call for help was sent to Chillicothe and Ware's ambulance and his deputies were called to the scene to assist in locating the body.

The Groninger boy, in company with other youths, had gone to the Kilgore bridge to swim. Details as to the cause of the drowning were lacking official confirmation at press time.

The search for the body was being made at press time.—Chillicothe News-Advertiser.

H. F. Decker and wife of Seattle, Washington, son of Mrs. Mary Decker, arrived in Ashville Sunday for a brief visit.

Mr. Decker, who is still officially affiliated with the Alaska Steamship Co., was married to Miss K. M. Dochard (beauty culturist) previous to the departure on their honeymoon.

Enroute from Seattle they visited San Francisco, Los Angeles, Pasadena, via Panama Canal, Havana, New York, Washington, Philadelphia and Cleveland.

They will leave in ten days or two weeks by way of Chicago and Milwaukee for Seattle where they will make their future home.

Biggest Mistake of All

The biggest of all mistakes is to be always watching for small ones.

Chic Sports Duds in Many Variants

Frocks, Suits, Ensembles for General Wear Are Fashionable, Flattering.

Sports dress is the fantastic note in the season's fashions. Its vogue, says a fashion authority in the New York Times, is apparently without reason, contradicting all the conventions of dress, yet like a coquette winning her capricious way, compels acceptance and approval. The name has come to express not equipment for sports activity, nor, for the matter of that, activity of any sort, but just a chic costume of a certain type which is in universal favor at present.

The sports frock, suit or ensemble is chic, youthful, slenderizing and a tribute to the genius of the designers who created a style which is all of these things successfully. Only an unerring judgment and a keen sense of proportion could express in dress these essentials to the comfort and content of women of varying sizes, figures and ages. The border between the suitable and unsuitable, the graceful and the grotesque is instinct, and it is quite clearly and charmingly defined in sports clothes for summer. The mode has grown into favor very gradually, but now that it has arrived the response is overwhelming.

Extravagant expressions of the sports suit idea were shown last season in the models in a mannish style, but of the most elaborate materials; handsome brocades and metallic cloths, handled as if they were homespun, and chevrons, and made into tunic blouses with short tailored skirts. With the gradual prevailing of feminine qualities, however, the sports costume has held its vogue and is now presented in the finest and most delicate fabrics, soft crepes and silks, voiles and, at the moment, chiffon, with the indorsement of exclusive houses.

One of the latest models from a famous French couturier is of white and black chiffon in a large plaid pattern, the blouse made in such fashion as to emphasize the white. The skirt, laid in deep box plaits, makes the black more conspicuous, giving the effect of irregular stripes, which is very skillfully done, and very pretty. Another sports frock of this sort is built of geranium red chiffon; both the bodice, which blouses over the girdle that swatches the hips, and the skirt are finely plaited, giving a fluttery movement. This model has narrow velvet ribbon scarfs that float backward from the neck; and the sleeves, which are wide, are also plaited and caught close at the wrist with bands of velvet ribbon—all in one shade of scarlet.

Voile Is Popular.

Starting with the most fragile version of sports dress, it is entertaining to follow along the line of designs and materials toward the more substantial sort. In this one type are following conservative lines. In one suit from this house the frock has the conventional straight bodice, with finely plaited skirt of the crepe. Bands of the crepe are stitched in V design on the front of the blouse and narrow bands stitched about the hips from the belt. The neck is cut in a rather low square, without a collar, and with the frock is worn a short tailored jacket of velveteen. The original model is made in rose beige crepe and brown velveteen, and will be equally smart in white crepe with black velveteen for the coat.

white silk braid of which large motifs are made down the front and which is used to bind the top of the skirt in an unusual manner. This suit is worn over a blouse of finely plaited white mousseline. Chanel makes a long, very straight bolero in a sports costume of blue crepe marocain, and uses fine tucking of the crepe to trim the edge of the coat and to elaborate the skirt. The bolero tends rather to make of the sports dress something less strictly of the tailor, and fits better the street dress or afternoon models. In either use the bolero, or the blouse which is varied to suggest a bolero, is almost invariably made of the same goods as the frock itself.

Combination of Materials.

Combination of two materials is engagingly illustrated in a two-piece sports suit from Madeline Vionnet in which she indulges her penchant for fine tucks—tucking the bodice diagonally, the skirt perpendicularly. A wide band of jersey cloth is added to the bottom of the skirt and about the hips, with a tailored bow at one side. Goupy has designed a swaggy sports frock in black and white, the skirt of black crepe, the blouse of white pique forming a fitted yoke above the skirt, and the blouse belted with strap and buckle of pique. Lucien Lelong varies his design in sports dress in the artistic combination of several shades of one color. Drecoll responds to the craze for reptilian patterns by creating a sports suit which has a white crepe skirt and a belted bodice of silk printed to imitate alligator skin. A scarf of crepe wound about the neck with ends floating at the back is embroidered in modernistic motifs. Martial et Armand use embroidery effectively on crepe sports suits.

A charming model is made of white crepe marocain with the modishly plaited skirt and a blouse jacket cut with the lower part snug about the hips, to which the upper section is attached to blouse slightly. The neck is collarless; and one large rever crosses to close at the side of the belt. The edges are embroidered all around both the jacket and the skirt hem. The plaits of the skirt are stitched down several inches from the top, and embroidery is used at the wrists and around the small cap-shaped hat of the crepe.

Buttons in Evidence.

Buttons for service or for trimming sports dresses are very much in evidence on frocks of different materials, and it is prophesied that they will be more generally used in the autumn. In a becoming little frock of the more elaborate sports type a straight, somewhat snugly fitting bodice of canton crepe is buttoned down the front to the line at which the skirt of mouslikasha is attached with a piping instead of a belt. This frock is collarless, the V neck being finished with piping and the point at which the waist line is indicated is higher than that in most sports models.

In two-piece sports suits many have the jumper blouse or sweater buttoned in a practical sort of way all the length, or with a few buttons in front or at one side.

The fact that we live longer than did our grandfathers is bringing us billions of dollars in cash, says a great insurance company, whose experts estimate that the total increase in earning power of American men and women in the present generation, or since 1901, is $3,500,000,000. This gain, they declare in Popular Science Monthly, has been due largely to the extension of life.

In 1901 a baby boy at birth was considered to have a potential value of $7,553. By 1924 this value increased to $9,333. This gain also, they conclude, is due to expectation of longer life, with a consequent longer period of earning capacity.

Plants Grow More at Night

With the aid of special measuring apparatus, Prof. F. M. Andrews of Indiana university has found that the stalks of some plants grow more in the night than they do in the day, says Popular Mechanics Magazine. The leaves showed as much development in the light as they did when the sun was down.

Use Fish as Illuminant

The candle fish is still being used by the Indians in some parts of British Columbia for illuminating purposes. After catching the candle fish, the Indians place them in a dry, sheltered place and wait till they have shrunk and all the water has evaporated from them. They then set the head or tail of the fish alight and use the carcass as they would a torch. There is so much oil in the carcass that it produces a bright, steady flame which burns slowly.

White-Crowned Sparrow

"Next to the meadowlark, no doubt, most people will vote the white-crowned sparrow the most fascinating singer of the Northwest. Often through the darkest night in the Virginia creeper or honeysuckle around the porch he utters his plaintive song—seemingly to say . . . 'Sweet, sweet, listen to me, won't you?'"—William Rogers Lord.

MRS. LILLIE DICK DEAD.

Mrs. Isaiah Morris received a telegram Friday apprising her of the death in San Antonio, Texas, of Mrs. Lillie Dick, formerly of this city. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Ada Vogel, of San Antonio.

The funeral services and burial were in San Antonio.

Eggs in the Twigs

The cuckoos make a flat platform of twigs, and lay their blue, rounded eggs, says Nature Magazine. The little ruby-throated hummingbird commences its nest, straddled upon a slender maple twig, or perhaps upon a hemlock bough overhanging a rippling stream.

Just a Pasture-al Tale

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

THE cow bell's distant tinkle broke suddenly into loud clappings, undervalued by the thuddings of rapid hoofs. Peggy Lynn, in wait at the drawbars, listened, smiling happily, then began calling keen and mellowly: "Sook cow! Sook-cow! Sook-cow! Sook Blue-bell! Brandy! Bell-Cow! Cherry! Lilac! Lady Luck! Sook-cow Sook-cow!"

Lucky they were coming thus early—half an hour ahead of sundown. It meant they were tight as drums with tender new grass and browse that by morning would be turned miraculously into foamy, creamy milk. Pastures got greener daily, still they didn't match the range along the creek—valley growth was always two weeks ahead of upland. Besides the creatures loved it so well that they had to be driven home, not called, the first few days. Also they had got tasty licks of bran-and-salt. Peggy and Jinny, her loyal helper, and after a sort, partner, had recklessly taken over the Lynn cows, not on shares as would have been safe, but upon a strict cash basis.

Peggy wanted real money in hand—the one very good thing she had ever lacked. Things came so easily she never had the fun of wanting them very, very badly. Henceforth she would buy or go without as she chose—of course keeping a tight rein on poor Jinny, whose supreme joy in a dollar was the wasting of it. This notwithstanding she had bought a bit of land, fairly dragged into it by Miss Peggy, and it was less than half paid for. Only a cabin—but it meant shelter for Jinny's flock. Isham, eldest of the lot, stood rope in hand before the culpin whence already lusty howlings answered the mother-chorus of lowings. Isham "kept a." calves—raising them was part of the game. A mighty profitable part when, as this season, they were all heifers that in twenty months would be fine young cows worth manifold their cost in milk. Good stock all—returning a pound of butter, down-weight, daily.

Dusk fell before milking ended—with every cup and bucket brimming full, not to name extras. That meant churning twice all round next day—each cow's milk was kept separate. Troublesome—but worth it. Lynbrook customers were glad to pay three times the market rate. Then there was the buttermilk, butter-flecked, almost as rich as cream—enough of it for all the black folk and white, the puppies and the youngest pigs. Often hot hoe cake went along with it—feeding the hungry was Peggy's dear delight.

It was partly that which made her deaf to the creamy man, who had pestered her, since he opened in March, to patronize him, saying: "Not quite so much money, maybe, until we're firm in the saddle; but—think of the trouble you'll miss and the pedigreed pigs and calves you can raise on your skim milk."

This May twilight she was dreadfully tired. Her wrists ached, her hands cramped—the big milking had been too heavy a strain. As Isham put up the bars, after turning the calves in the pasture, a hail came across them—that pestilent fellow had come again. But on a different errand—in behalf of a friend who was planning to open an exclusive resort hotel in the foothills twenty miles off.

Accidentally he had tasted Peggy's butter—in result he was determined to have it, all she made—no matter about the price. Send for it every day—also for garden stuff, broilers, fruits, cake, strictly home-made. A fortune sure in any of them, once they had won their public.

"Let's talk it over at supper," Peggy conceded. The creamy man shook his head. "Better talk it out between you—I'll fetch him tomorrow," he said over his shoulder as he scuttled away.

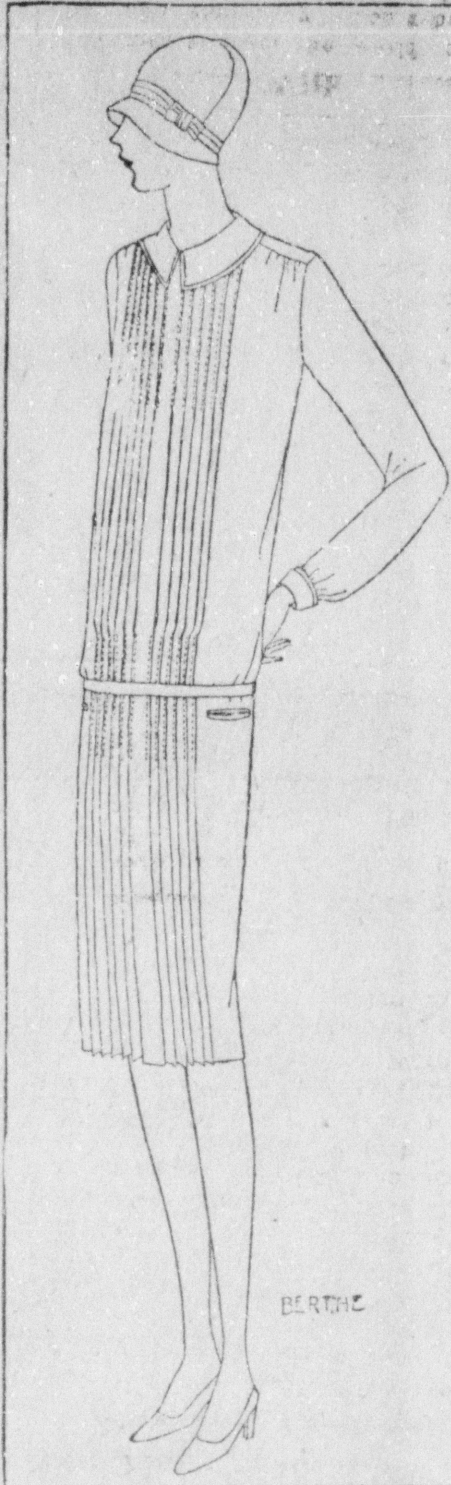

Young Bruce, the hotel man, came, saw, but did not conquer—Peggy was too much in love with her work to think of quitting it. But she let herself be persuaded to help a bit by reporting to him over the telephone whenever she found things he might buy to his advantage. Thus they came to have a loose-woven comradeship, never guessing its strength until October. The break might not have come even then but for Jinny, who upon discovery that her sometime husband was real sure-enough dead and properly buried, said airily, "So now I'm gwine marry dat Jim Baxter who's been pestering me so long. So we'll hab ter dissolve dis yere partnership."

At that Peggy laughed hard—then with Jinny away sighed even harder. She had made money hand over hand—but oh, she was tired. Upon this mood of discouragement in walked Sidney Bruce, Esquire, armed with double determination, a string of pearls and a platinum ring no normal woman could possibly resist. Peggy, being strictly normal, did not try to resist. Instead she slid the circlet upon its proper finger deftly, twirled it about, flashed it in autumn sunshine, then said with her trickiest smile: "If I milk another month, I shan't be able to get it on." And she laid the pearls against her lips.

Sidney looked aggrieved. "I call that wicked waste," he said stidily.

Peggy giggled, saying demurely: "I don't let things I want go to waste." "Neither shall I—hereafter," Sidney said, catching her in his arms.

Smart Crepe de Chine Dress Is Easily Made

This smart crepe de chine dress, says the Woman's Home Companion, may be made with no trouble in a surprisingly short time. There's a choice of colors—beige, blue and white—to cover the summer vacation season and also navy and black if you need to think of the dress for the fall. A double collar and cuffs with the top layer of cream crepe de chine provide a becoming bit of contrast.

Wrong Choice of Color Can Wreck Appearance

The poor choice of color has an important influence on a woman's final appearance, points out Eileen Bourne in an article in Liberty Magazine. "There are countless women who could lift themselves out of the ranks of the ordinary by a better understanding of color."

"The woman of neutral coloring—with hair, eyes and skin of no particular brilliance," Miss Bourne explains, "needs warm color to inject life into her personality, such as henna, terra cotta, apricot, a blue somewhere in between the cold, hard shades and midnight. Women with florid complexions must avoid shades that have red or pink in them. Blonds with high color cheapen the effect with such shades as red, rose, bright pink, fuchsia or orange."

"There are muddy browns, purples, taupe and light, strong blues, that bring out every bad feature of skin and eyes, and that, combined with an unrelieved black, may add a dozen years to the woman who has no right to use them. Gray-haired women with that lovely blue light in their hair have to be supercritical in their color choice to avoid giving an ugly yellowish look to their heads."

New Hair Styles Both Puzzling, Contradictory

Contradictory fashion now provides for both long and short hair. Short hair or at least the appearance of short hair is given approval during daytime hours, while for evening the chignon is coming back to its own. Some meet this demand by letting the hair grow and wearing it in the daytime arranged so as to look bobbed. Others meet the situation with a wig. These wigs do not always follow the color of the hair beneath. White wigs are popular abroad, especially if they have either a certain pinkish or bluish tinge.

Hosiery Waterproofed, No More Rain, Mud Marks

Waterproof stockings have become popular with English women of fashion, and showers no longer cause rainmarks down the front of the stockings and mud splashes up the back. The waterproofing employed does not alter the appearance of the silk. Rain rolls off without leaving an impression and the application of a damp sponge removes mud stains. These stockings can be washed again and again without any ill effects.

Knitted Capes for Sports Wear

Knitted military capes for sports wear are much seen in Paris. One pretty model, much approved, has three colored stripes on the small turn-over collar. The cape itself is beige, or natural colored wool. The new capes carry out the ensemble idea. They are chosen to match either skirt or sweater worn under them.

Capes With Yokes

Women all over the world still wear the yoke, especially when the yoke is the distinguishing feature of the new capes, which will be a style development this spring.

Idea Is a Good One

"It is an excellent practice to carry money always in more than one pocket," says a writer in an exchange. This is a commendable idea, fellows. Carry plenty of money at all times in every pocket. Nothing is a surer guarantee against embarrassment than 12 or 14 pockets full of money.—Boston Transcript.

Old Geographical Titles

The kingdom of the Two Sicilies, former kingdom of Italy, comprised Naples, or southern Italy, and the island of Sicily. The name "Kingdom of Naples" was often also used. In the Middle Ages the southern part of the Italian mainland came to be known as "Sicily on this side of the Faro" (the strait of Messina).

"It's Frank, sweetheart."

"I can't understand you."

"Listen—F for Ferdie, R for Robert, A for Arthur, N for Nat and K for Kenneth."

"But, dearest, which one of the five are you?"

The Devil Dogs

Dumbe—I see they're trying to rid China of foreigners.

Belle—Oh, aren't our marines wonderful? To think that just a handful of them can drive all those millions of Chinese out of the country!

Unfortunate Remark

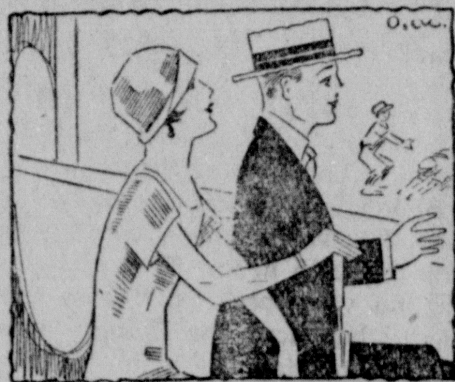

Roscoe—Darling, you have teeth like pearls.

Marie—You brute! Are you hinting that I have a mouth like an oyster?

Plenty of It

Dentist—You yelled like a wild man. I thought you had at least a little nerve.

Wilkins (nursing his jaw)—Well, I did. You'll find it in that tooth.

BASEBALL LANGUAGE

"They caught him at home."

"I thought you said he was out."

"I did."

"Well, how can he be at home, if he is out?"

That Means Up or Down

"Money can take you anywhere,"

Remarked old Dan DeWitt;

"Money can take you anywhere, Save where you can't take it."

Finding Out

Hazel—The lights went out and one of the boys kissed me—George.

Mabel—How did you know it was George?

Hazel—He asked my forgiveness this morning.

And Now You Know

"Ah, you are the young man in question? What's your name?"

"Ivan Auszelchmugencugtekt."

"How do you spell it?"

"As it is pronounced!"—Pele Mele, Paris.

All Off

He—True, my salary is not large, but then, two can live as cheaply as one.

She—But, Tom, dear, you forget—there's mother.

Wise

Ted—I saw my doctor about my loss of memory.

Jerry—What did he do?

Ted—Made me pay in advance.

Economy

Visitor—How is it that you have a picture of just one of the twins.

Mrs. Thrifty—They both look exactly alike, so what's the difference?

Diet for Mentally Ill

Because mental illness is a disorder of the entire individual and not merely of the mind, the diet should be prescribed with the same care concerning proper balance and vitamin content as in physical illness, declares Dr. L. D. Hubbard in Hygeia Magazine. Mental defectives, even idiots, do not appear to suffer greatly from dietary errors.

Watch Your Woolens!

With the summer season, the moth miller is abroad hunting a good place to lay her eggs. She prefers woolens as a good place to deposit her eggs, for there will be good feeding for her young.

Keep the cover on your upholstered furniture, brushed at least once each week, remove all cushions, and use your electric cleaner now and then. DO NOT COVER YOUR FURNITURE WITH COVERS. The young moth will crawl thru the covering and destroy your coverings before you are aware of their presence.

Place your woolen clothing and blankets in a moth-proof chest and cease to worry. We have just received a large shipment of "Treasure Chests" lined inside with red cedar, with walnut on the outside. They are beautifully finished and will add greatly to the beauty of the room, as well as serve as a protection to your clothing.

Priced from $16.50 up

Haven't you often wished that you had a folding chair to take with you on picnics and camping tours? We have some that are very fine for that purpose. They fold up into a small space, yet are comfortably lazy. They are very handy around the house when guests arrive, especially for use on the porch. They are strong, holding the largest persons, and yet are low priced.

They start at $4.25

MRS. LILLIE DICK DEAD.

Mrs. Isaiah Morris received a telegram Friday apprising her of the death in San Antonio, Texas, of Mrs. Lillie Dick, formerly of this city. She is survived by one daughter, Mrs. Ada Vogel, of San Antonio.

The funeral services and burial were in San Antonio.

Eggs in the Twigs

The cuckoos make a flat platform of twigs, and lay their blue, rounded eggs, says Nature Magazine. The little ruby-throated hummingbird commences its nest, straddled upon a slender maple twig, or perhaps upon a hemlock bough overhanging a rippling stream.

Just a Pasture-al Tale

By MARTHA M. WILLIAMS

(Copyright)

THE cow bell's distant tinkle broke suddenly into loud clankings, undervolced by the thuddings of rapid hoofs. Peggy Lynn, in wait at the drawbars, listened, smiling happily, then began calling keen and mellowly: "Sook cow! Sook-ook! Sook-ook! Blue-bell! Brandy! Bell-Cow! Cherry! Lila! Lady Luck! Sook-ook Sook-ook!"

Lucky they were coming thus early—half an hour ahead of sundown. It meant they were tight as drums with tender new grass and browse that by morning would be turned miraculously into foamy, creamy milk. Pastures got greener daily, still they didn't match the range along the creek—valley growth was always two weeks ahead of upland. Besides the creatures loved it so well that they had to be driven home, not called, the first few days. Also they had got tasty licks of bran-and-salt. Peggy and Jinny, her loyal helper, and after a sort, partner, had recklessly taken over the Lynn cows, not on shares as would have been safe, but upon a strict cash basis.

Peggy wanted real money in hand—the one very good thing she had ever lacked. Things came so easily she never had the fun of wanting them very, very badly. Henceforth she would buy or go without as she chose—of course keeping a tight rein on poor Jinny, whose supreme joy in a dollar was the wasting of it. This notwithstanding she had bought a bit of land, fairly dragooned into it by Miss Peggy, and it was less than half paid for. Only a cabin—but it meant shelter for Jim's flock. Isham, eldest of the lot, stood rope in hand before the calfpen whence already lusty howlings answered the mother-chorus of lowings. Isham "kept off" calves—raising them was part of the game. A mighty profitable part when, as this season, they were all heifers that in twenty months would be fine young cows worth manyfold their cost in milk. Good stock all—returning a pound of butter, down-weight, daily.

Dusk fell before milking ended—with every cup and bucket brimming full, not to name extras. That meant churning twice all round next day—each cow's milk was kept separate. Troublesome—but worth it. Lynnbrook customers were glad to pay three times the market rate. Then there was the buttermilk, butter-flecked, almost as rich as cream—enough of it for all the black folk and white, the puppies and the youngest pigs. Often hot hoeecake went along with it—feeding the hungry was Peggy's dear delight.

It was partly that which made her deaf to the creamy man, who had pestered her, since he opened in March, to patronize him, saying: "Not quite so much money, maybe, until we're firm in the saddle; but—think of the trouble you'll miss and the pedigreed pigs and calves you can raise on your skin milk."

This May twilight she was dreadfully tired. Her wrists ached, her hands cramped—the big milking had been too heavy a strain. As Isham put up the bars, after turning the calves in the pasture, a hail came across them—that pestilent fellow had come again. But on a different errand—in behalf of a friend who was planning to open an exclusive resort hotel in the foothills twenty miles off.

Accidentally he had tasted Peggy's butter—in result he was determined to have it, all she made—no matter about the price. Send for it every day—also for garden stuff, broilers, fruits, cake, strictly home-made. A fortune sure in any of them, once they had won their public.

"Let's talk it over at supper," Peggy conceded. The creamy man shook his head. "Better talk it out between you—I'll fetch him tomorrow," he said over his shoulder as he scattered away.

Young Bruce, the hotel man, came, saw, but did not conquer—Peggy was too much in love with her work to think of quitting it. But she let herself be persuaded to help a bit by reporting to him over the telephone whenever she found things he might buy to his advantage. Thus they came to have a loose-woven comradery, never guessing its strength until October. The break might not have come even then but for Jinny, who upon discovery that her sometime husband was real sure-enough dead and properly buried, said airily, "So now I'm gwine marry dat Jim Baxter who's been pestering me so long. So we'll hab ter dissolve dis yere partnership."

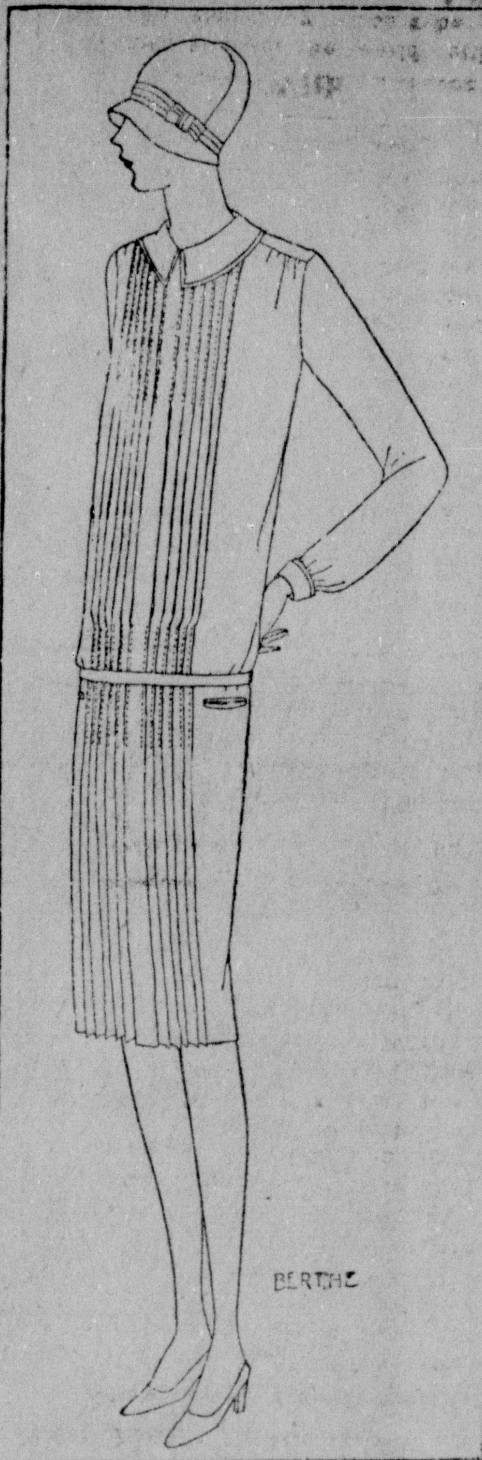

At that Peggy laughed hard—then with Jinny away sighed even harder. She had made money hand over hand—but oh, she was tired. Upon this mood of discouragement in walked Sidney Bruce, Esquire, armed with double determination, a string of pearls and a platinum ring no normal woman could possibly resist. Peggy, being strictly normal, did not try to resist. Instead she slid the circlet upon its proper finger deftly, twisted it about, flashed it in autumn sunshine, then said with her trickiest smile: "If I milk another month, I shan't be able to get it on." And she laid the pearls against her lips.

Sidney looked aggrieved. "I call that wicked waste," he said stiffly.

Peggy giggled, saying demurely: "I don't let things I want go to waste."

"Neither shall I—hereafter," Sidney said, catching her in his arms.

Smart Crepe de Chine Dress Is Easily Made

This smart crepe de chine dress, says the Woman's Home Companion, may be made with no trouble in a surprisingly short time. There's a choice of colors—beige, blue and white—to cover the summer vacation season and also navy and black if you need to think of the dress for the fall. A double collar and cuffs with the top layer of cream crepe de chine provide a becoming bit of contrast.

Wrong Choice of Color Can Wreck Appearance

The poor choice of color has an important influence on a woman's final appearance, points out Eileen Bourne in an article in Liberty Magazine. "There are countless women who could lift themselves out of the ranks of the ordinary by a better understanding of color."

"The woman of neutral coloring—with hair, eyes and skin of no particular brilliance," Miss Bourne explains, "needs warm color to inject life into her personality, such as henna, terra cotta, apricot, a blue somewhere in between the cold, hard shades and midnight. Women with florid complexions must avoid shades that have red or pink in them. Blonds with high color cheapen the effect with such shades as red, rose, bright pink, fuchsia or orange."

"There are muddy browns, purples, taupe and light, strong blues, that bring out every bad feature of skin and eyes, and that, combined with an unrelieved black, may add a dozen years to the woman who has no right to use them. Gray-haired women with that lovely blue light in their hair have to be supercritical in their color choice to avoid giving an ugly yellowish look to their heads."

New Hair Styles Both Puzzling, Contradictory

Contradictory fashion now provides for both long and short hair. Short hair or at least the appearance of short hair is given approval during daytime hours, while for evening the chignon is coming back to its own. Some meet this demand by letting the hair grow and wearing it in the daytime arranged so as to look bobbed. Others meet the situation with a wig. These wigs do not always follow the color of the hair beneath. White wigs are popular abroad, especially if they have either a certain pinkish or bluish tinge.

Hosiery Waterproofed, No More Rain, Mud Marks

Waterproof stockings have become popular with English women of fashion, and showers no longer cause rainmarks down the front of the stockings and mud splashes up the back. The waterproofing employed does not alter the appearance of the silk. Rain rolls off without leaving an impression and the application of a damp sponge removes mud stains. These stockings can be washed again and again without any ill effects.

Knitted Capes for Sports Wear

Knitted military capes for sports wear are much seen in Paris. One pretty model, much approved, has three colored stripes on the small turn-over collar. The cape itself is beige, or natural colored wool. The new capes carry out the ensemble idea. They are chosen to match either skirt or sweater worn under them.

Capes With Yokes

Women all over the world still wear the yoke, especially when the yoke is the distinguishing feature of the new capes, which will be a style development this spring.
